U. S. Expects Australia To Ask Move Against Reds

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Officials here expect one or more of the British Commonwealth nations to appeal soon for American help in shoring up southeast Asia against communism.

Such an appeal would be an outcome of the recent Colombo Conference of Commonwealth Foreign Ministers, at which Australia's new government took the lead in calling for economic assistance to southeast Asia.

The Commonwealth as a whole is unlikely to make the approach to the United States in view of the attitude of Prime Minister Nehru of India. At Colombo Nehru shied away from aligning his country with anything that might look like a bloc against the Soviet Union.

Move by Australia Likely

The first move, therefore, is expected to come from Percy Spender, Australia's minister for external affairs, with the blessing of the British, Canadian, New Zealand and possibly one or two other Commonwealth governments.

This would be in line with Secretary Acheson's National Press Club speech, in which he argued that the United States alone had only a limited ability to influence the course of events in southeast Asia.

He pictured the United States as only one of many nations concerned, and also emphasized that the greatest contribution to stopping the spread of communism would have to come from the peoples and governments of southeast Asia themselves.

The prospects for one form of American help—namely, technical assistance under the Point Four program—brightened yesterday with word that a new bi-partisan bill on the subject would be introduced in the House today.

Rivalries Reconciled

Until now there have been two rival Point Four bills—one sponsored by Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.) of the Foreign Affairs Committee; the other by Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.) a leading Republican member of the committee. The Herter bill stressed the assurances which foreign governments would have to give to private American investors

Now the two have been reconciled in a single compromise bill, and bi-partisanship has been reasserted on at least one important measure of foreign policy. Assistant Secretary of State Willard Thorp plans to testify on the new bill at a Foreign Affairs Committee hearing this morning.

With the Senate in recess, Secretary Acheson and his aides had a brief respite from Republican

LAY THAT PISTOL DOWN—Three-year-old Russell (Rocky) Robey of 213 Franklin st., Alexandria, sadly looks out of window at playmates. He was out of commission yesterday after he pulled trigger of his father's revolver and the bullet scraped his left leg. His mother, Mrs. Henry T. A scream a few seconds later brought Mrs. Robey running and "Rocky" was packed off to Alexandria Hospital. He's okay, but he had to stay home

Jackson Hits Clark Secrecy In Bride Case

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Supreme Court Justice Robert H. Jackson yesterday struck at secret evidence that was used by the man who sits on the bench beside him—Justice Tom C. Clark, then the Attorney General—to prevent a war bride's entry into the United States.

Jackson declared, while Clark paid grave attention, that "the plea that evidence must be secret is abhorrent to free men because it provides a cloak for the malevolent, the misinformed, the meddlesome and the corrupt to play the role of informer undetected and uncorrected."

Nonetheless, the high court upheld Attorney General Clark and the lower courts in agreeing that Mrs. Ellen Knauff had been properly excluded.

The 4-to-3 decision was read by Justice Sherman Minton, with Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson and Justices Stanley F. Reed and Harold H. Burton agreeing. Dissenting with Jackson were Justices Hugo L. Black and Felix Frankfurter. Clark and Justice William O. Douglas took no part in the case.

Jackson said he was "sure the officials here have acted from a sense of duty" and he expressed "personal confidence" in the officials, i.e., Clark.

The case had this history:

Mrs. Knauff, German-born, fled to Czechoslovakia during the Hitler regime. She went to England as a refugee in 1939, served "efficiently and honorably" with the Royal Air Force for three and a half years. Then she worked for our War Department in Germany, where she was rated "very good" and "excellent." She met and married—with the permission of the United States Army — Kurt W. Knauff, a naturalized American and former GI, then a civilian employe of the Army. He sought to bring her home under the War Brides Act.

But Clark barred her on the basis of confidential information, declaring she "was formerly a paid agent of the Czechoslovakian government" reporting on Americans assigned to the civil censorship division in Germany.

Mrs. Knauff denied this, declaring she believed herself "a victim of a foul denunciation by a woman jealous of my husband." Clark said the FBI "feels that she would be a hazard to internal security."

Minton reasoned that the law gave Clark the right to bar her

Arguments Postponed In 4 Important Cases

Arguments in four of the most important Supreme Court cases of the 1949-50 term have been postponed until the week of March 13, partly owing to the absence of Justice William O. Douglas. He is expected back about March 1, after recuperating from a horseback accident last fall.

The tidelands oil case now is set for argument March 13, to be followed the same week by the three segregation cases: Henderson, Sweatt and McLaurin. One involves dining car segregation, the others segregation at the Universities of Texas and Oklahoma.

Binding Caucus Asked In Rules Change Battle; George for Budget Cut

Top Democrat Urges Slash of $3 Billion; GOP Acts for Early Excise Reduction

By The Associated Press

A top Democrat yesterday called for a three-billion-dollar slash in President Truman's budget, and Republicans launched a drive for a "quickie" bill to cut excise taxes by more than 600 million dollars a year.

Simultaneously, House GOP Leader Martin charged that a "state of confusion" among the President's advisers had delayed transmittal of Administration tax-boosting plans to Congress.

The proposal for a reduction in Mr. Truman's $42,439,000,000 budget came from Chairman George (D., Ga.) of the Senate Finance Committee. He called for Government economy to erase more than one half of the anticipated 5-billion-dollar deficit next year.

A new delay in Mr. Truman's tax message to Congress caused wide speculation on Capitol Hill.

Charles G. Ross, the President's press secretary, said yesterday morning that the tax message probably would be sent to the Capitol Hill late this week. Previously it had been indicated the message might be ready early in the week.

Representative Martin told newsmen:

"I'm sorry there is a state of confusion in the Administration. It is delaying business, because the people are holding off buying until the excise taxes are reduced.

"I want a 'quickie' bill to cut the excises right now. Then we can take up other tax problems later."

Mr. Truman has indicated he favors a reduction in excise levies—which cover such things as furs, luggage, jewelry, light bulbs, transportation and communications—and a "moderate" increase in revenues by raising other taxes.

His program has been greeted in Congress with bipartisan cries for less spending and lower taxes.

Martin speculated that the delay of the tax message is caused by a disagreement on "how a reduction in excises can be used as an excuse to raise other taxes."

Democrats had little to say about taxes. Those who will handle the legislation when it get to Congress, including House Ways and Means Chairman Doughton (D., N. C.), said they have been given no word at all on what might be in the message.

In proposing a budget cut, George did indicate he would oppose any substantial increase in taxes, but might go along if the Administration merely seeks to close some loopholes in existing law.

In 10-Year Plan

Truman Asks New Powers Over Rubber

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

President Truman asked Congress yesterday to give him new, 10-year authority to insure against another wartime rubber shortage.

The plan he proposed contemplates a disposal of the Government's 700 million dollars worth of synthetic rubber plants to private owners, but under conditions guaranteeing adequate current and potential production.

He asked that his proposals take the form of legislation to replace the present Federal authority over synthetic rubber that expires next June 30. The proposed new law would permit the Government:

1. To maintain—whether in Government or private hands—the present million-ton annual capacity synthetic rubber industry to meet war-emergency demands. Part would be kept in operation, the rest in stand-by condition.

2. To specify how much of the different kinds of synthetic rubber should be produced each year, and to require its use in certain products to assure its production and consumption.

3. To dispose of the Govern-

President Calls for Defeat of Move to End Discharge Right; Compromise Talked

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

An effort to "bind" House Democrats to stand together against a Rules Committee coalition power coup was considered by House Democratic leaders last night, as President Truman urged them to fight back.

Speaker Sam Rayburn discussed the possibility of a "binding" Democratic caucus with a special "strategy committee" of Truman Democrats opposing restoration of the Rules group's once-formidable powers.

Rayburn told newsmen no conclusions were reached on proposals to convene a special Democratic caucus but said he will continue to canvass the rules outlook with other Democratic members of the House.

Possibility of a substitute discharge rule being thrown into the breach meanwhile was reported under discussion at a closed meeting of five members of the Rules Committee generally sympathetic to the Administration program.

House Rules Chairman Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.) was reported checking strength on his own committee for the possible substitute rule.

Sabath later sat in on the "strategy" huddle in Rayburn's office with Representative Herman P. Eberharter (D., Pa.), author of the present 21-day "discharge" rule, and Representative Michael J. Kirwan (D., Ohio), chairman of the Democratic congressional campaign committee.

Rayburn said the possibility of a substitute change in the rules as well as a Democratic caucus figured in the discussion but said nothing had jelled yet on either proposal.

Disturbed lest the Rules Committee's bid for its old powers endanger his "Fair Deal" program, Mr Truman reportedly urged his leaders to vigorously oppose the Rules Committee coalition move for repeal of the present 21-day discharge rule, during a "Big Four" legislative huddle at the White House.

The 21-day rule was adopted at the outset of last session by a 275-to-142 vote after House Democrats "bound" themselves to support it at a caucus similar to the one now under consideration.

The present rule gives any committee chairman the right to move for floor consideration of a re-

68,000 Miners Idle in 6-State Union 'Revolt'

Pittsburgh, Jan. 16 (AP).—No-contract, no-work strikes today idled 68,000 United Mine Workers in six States despite John L. Lewis' suggestion—traditionally an order—that they dig coal.

The action of the restless miners, rallying behind a "We-Want-a-Contract" slogan, affected already depleted coal reserves. But President Truman was quoted as saying he still lacks sufficient evidence to declare a national emergency.

UMW heads from Lewis on down offered no explanation for the latest in a series of work stoppages in the Nation's sprawling soft-coal fields.

Vice President John D. Battle of the National Coal Association said it is "a rebellion against Lewis." Operators have branded sporadic strikes a union policy of harassment in Lewis' long fight for a new contract.

While Lewis kept his own counsel, a move got under way in eastern Pennsylvania's anthracite fields to organize a rival union to his UMW. It is the first such effort in 15 years.

Miner T. F. Brennan disclosed existence of the group—the Independent Anthracite Mine Workers—which he said is being operated by a 10-man executive board and

Miners' Credit Shut Off At Stores of U. S. Steel

Pittsburgh, Jan. 16 (AP).—The United States Steel Corp. today shut off credit to all nonworking miners at its company stores operated by the subsidiary Union Supply Co.

A U. S. Steel spokesman explained:

"Since July, bills have gone beyond what would be good business practice. We've helped the miners over the hump many times, not only during strikes, but we've reached a point where we can't go any further with it."

Russian Bloc Boycotts U. N. On China Issue

Lake Success, Jan. 16 (AP).—The Soviet bloc walked out of three United Nations committees today and clamped a general boycott on all meetings of the U. N. anywhere in the world as long as Nationalist China is represented.

Persons in high authority in the U. N. do not feel, however, that the Russians plan to pull out of the U. N., in spite of their walks from the Security Council last week and from the three groups today. They predict the Russians will merely take a vacation until the Chinese issue is settled.

The Russians have put up the argument that they alone are protecting the U. N. charter; that the Nationalist China delegation represents nobody and is illegal; and that they won't sit at the same table with an illegal delegation.

Nationalist China's top delegate here, T. F. Tsiang, was in high spirits over the Soviet rage, the reported successes of the Chinese air forces at home and the United States decision to pull American officials out of Red China. He attended the first 1950 meeting of the year-round Little Assembly, where the Russians never have been represented.

The groups affected today were: the Economic and Social Council committee on procedure, the subcommission on the prevention of discrimination and the protection of minorities; and the special committee on stateless persons. No other meetings were held.

In the committee on procedure, Ivan Kamenev., U. S. S. R., and Vladimir Houdek, permanent Czechoslovak delegate to the U. N., strode out.

At the start of the meeting, Kamenev introduced a resolution to unseat the Nationalist China delegate. Chairman Jose Encinas, Peru, ruled him out of order, but the Russian challenged the ruling. The committee upheld the chairman, 6 to 2. (Czechoslovakia and

Saar Leasing Is Opposed By Germans

Bonn, Germany, Jan. 16 (AP).—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer today challenged France's plan to take a long-term lease on the Saar Basin coal mines which he claimed belonged to the West German Republic.

Dewey Rejects O'Dwyer Legal Gambling Plan

Albany, Jan. 16 (U.P.).—Governor Thomas E. Dewey tonight called New York Mayor William O'Dwyer's plan for legalized gambling "a shocking, immoral and indecent proposal.

In a special message to the Legislature, Dewey said it is "fundamentally immoral" to encourage gambling in the variety of forms proposed by the New York City mayor.

"It would be immoral for Government to make available to all of its people a State-wide gambling apparatus with the implied assumption that the gains of chance were a fair substitute for or supplement to the honorable business of producing the goods and services by which the people of the Nation live," Dewey said.

O'Dwyer proposed last week that the State Legislature legalize betting on sporting events to wipe out New York's gambling underworld and get revenue for the State government.

The Governor said he had always had personal doubts about the wisdom of morality of pari-mutuel betting on horses, which has been legal in New York State since before the war.

But pari-mutuel betting, he said, is confined to those who are actually able to go to the track.

"Therefore, it is not a lure dangled before all people in all walks

House Committee To Hold Hearings On D C. Budget

An open hearing for Washington citizens to discuss the record 119-million-dollar District budget for the year starting July 1 will be held at 10 a.m. Friday.

Chairman Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.) of the House District Appropriations Subcommittee, announced the hearing, and said the place will be named later.

He said he looks for an all-day hearing. Those wishing to testify are asked to notify the subcommittee in advance.

Meanwhile, Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.) announced the House and Senate subcommittees in charge of District revenue will confer in an executive session with the Commissioners at 10 a.m. Friday.

7 Witnesses in 'Snags' Trial Refuse to Answer Questions

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

The prosecution yesterday ran into a barrage of reluctant witnesses who refused, on grounds of self-incrimination, to testify against William "Snags" Lewis and two associates in District Court.

More than 110 questions, asked by the sixth day of the gambling trial, bounced back to prosecutors William Hitz and Edward L. Carey with the answer:

"I refuse to answer that question on the grounds that the answer might tend to incriminate me."

Lewis, alleged ringleader of a $14,000,000-a-year gambling syndicate; Attilio Acalotti, the self-styled "Mayor of Thomas Circle," and Frank Billeci, a Washington Times-Herald circulation man, are on trial charged with operating a numbers-lottery. They were arrested last March as a result of eight simultaneous raids led by United States Attorney George Morris Fay, and indicted in April by the special gambling grand jury.

The seven witnesses who refused yesterday to answer Government questions on grounds of self-incrimination are:

Murray J. Olf, 300 New Jersey ave. se., proprietor of State Wide News Distributors, 3701 Bladensburg rd., Colmar Manor, Md. Olf and eight others also were indicted by the special grand jury, and face trial February 27. He refused to answer questions concerning primarily the lease of a race-results "ticker" by him to either Lewis, or—

Mrs. Sadie E. Stanton, 4310 46th st., Bladensburg, Md. Marshals arrested Lewis and 13 others in an air-conditioned sound-proof room with a one-way peephole in a small bungalow at this address on March 25, 1949. Mrs. Stanton refused to answer 40 questions, mostly about the specially constructed room in her house.

Sam Lieberman, alias Sam Lee, 418 Florida ave. ne., former president of Associated Contractors, Inc. He refused to answer 14 questions about Lewis and his contracting firm. In the December trial of Lewis and 13 others charged with gambling, it was testified that the special room at 4310 46th ave., Bladensburg, was constructed by Leiberman's firm.

Ora Drew Darling, cab driver, 1216 10th st. nw. Earlier in the trial, Bernice Franklin, Acalotti's former girl friend who turned State's evidence 11 months ago, testified that Darling turned in numbers play and cash to Acalotti

Shapiro Denies Helping FBI Investigate Judith Coplon

New York, Jan. 16 (NYHT).—Harold P. Shapiro, Justice Department lawyer, whose hotel trysts with Judith Coplon were related at her Washington trial last June, denied today that he acted as a stool pigeon against her or that he entrapped her for the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Further, the 34-year-old bachelor and Yale law school graduate gave the lie to her Washington testimony that when she went to hotels with him and spent nights in his apartment at the beginning of 1949 they discussed her alleged love for Valentin A. Gubitchev. The fact is, Shapiro swore today in United States District Court, he never heard of the Russian engineer until after Gubitchev and Miss Coplon were arrested last March 4.

"Are you still a friend of hers?" Archibald Palmer, Miss Coplon's counsel, asked the witness.

"I don't hate her," Shapiro answered as he leaned forward and adjusted his thick glasses.

Shapiro, 5 feet 9 inches tall and weighing about 150 pounds, testified at the espionage pretrial hearing for the two defendants. They charge the indictment should be quashed on the ground evidence was obtained through the tainted source of wiretaps. The Government concedes that leads were obtained through that medium, but maintains that evidence came from tips and personal surveillance. Wiretap evidence is inadmissible in Federal courts.

Miss Coplon, 5 feet tall and weighing 100 pounds, alleged that

Virginia Gets $597,493,053 Balanced Budget From Tuck

Richmond, Va., Jan. 16 (AP).—A record State budget of $597,493,053, more than a third earmarked for the direct benefit of localities, went to the Virginia General Assembly today.

It included a major innovation in State financial policy toward the localities—a recommended 45 million dollars in grants from the general fund surplus for school construction. This was a campaign commitment of Governor-elect John S. Battle and Governor Tuck's estimate of revenues and suggestions on how they should be spent were in line with the pledges of his successor.

Hardly had copies of Tuck's budget been placed before the members of the Assembly when Delegate Howard H. Adams of Northampton, who will become chairman of the House appropriations committee, dropped in a bill to carry out the recommendations.

And he had a word of cheer for the taxpayer.

"The budget recommendations before you can be financed without additional taxes," he told the House of Delegates.

Tuck's message to the legislators said that the big bill to defray the costs of all State operations for the next two years had been pushed to new peaks by "the greatly increased momentum of the movement to shift more and more of the cost of local government to the State government."

The outgoing Governor's budget would appropriate from all sources—general and special funds, Fed-

Runaway Engine Section Carries 2 On Perilous Ride

Milwaukee, Jan. 16 (AP).—The forward section of a big streamlined locomotive, its brake cylinders shattered, careened through four depot yards today before stopping itself on an upgrade.

"We just prayed," said Engineer William Jordan, 69, of the Milwaukee Road's Olympian Hiawatha, which smashed into a semi-trailer and truck near Duplainville, 17 miles west of here.

Jordan and his fireman, Benjamin Fuelleman, rode the uncontrollable engine through Brookfield, Elm Grove, Wauwatosa and the Union Station here. Finally, after negotiating the sharp curves at both ends of the station here, the engine stopped on an upgrade atop a trestle over the Kinnickinnic River.

The train was traveling at around 80 miles an hour when it smashed into the truck. The driver leaped to safety.

13 Children Need More Than $30 Weekly, Wife Says

A 41-year-old woman filed suit yesterday for a District Court order compelling her husband to support her and their 13 children.

She is Mrs. Selma Compton, who said that for three weeks after her husband, Howard H. Compton, a jeweler at 1730 G st. nw., allegedly left her on December 19, he contributed only a total of $90.

Her suit, filed through Attorney Louis Lebowitz, said the sum was "wholly insufficient to start buying groceries, much less the other necessities of life."

The suit says that the Comptons married in 1929, and have children ranging from 19 years of age to twins 2½ years old.

The maintenance suit says that Compton nets $1500 a month in his jewelry and watch-repair business. Yet, it is charged, he has refused to get Mrs. Compton an electric washing machine and a modern gas stove.

Decontrolled Rents Soared, Woods Says

8,000,000 Families

Housing Bill For Middle Group Aided

Post Reporter

President Murray D. Lincoln of the Cooperative League of the USA urged Congress yesterday to pass the Administration's "middle income" housing bill to help eight million families break out of a "bottleneck."

Lincoln, of Columbus, Ohio, is head of the American Farm Bureau Federation Insurance Cos.—the Farm Bureau Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., the Farm Bureau Mutual Fire Insurance Co., and the Farm Bureau Life Insurance Co.

Lincoln was a witness at a Senate Banking Subcommittee hearing on the Spence-Sparkman bill to set up a cooperative housing plan. Under the program the Government would lend 100 million dollars to start a new Federal agency which in turn would make loans to housing cooperatives and other nonprofit groups.

The agency would finance loans up to $2,250,000,000 guaranteed by the Government, through the sale of debentures. The repayment period would be 50 to 60 years at low interest, about 2½ percent under present conditions.

Business Funds Insufficient

Lincoln said the program is based on a principle which would open the way to "good, adequate housing at a reasonable cost to the middle-income families of America."

He said that funds available from business institutions to help solve the housing problem on a cooperative basis are a pittance compared to those for which there is need.

The three insurance companies he heads would like to use some of their funds for cooperative housing, he said, but the money on hand is not enough.

Suggests New Agency

Lincoln suggested that the program should be administered by a a new agency, similar to the Rural Electrification Administration, and not by the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

His request for a new agency was echoed by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor John O'Grady, secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities.

Monsignor O'Grady told the subcommittee his group believes the National Housing Act should be administered by a separate office or agency on the same level as the Public Housing Administration, the Federal Housing Administration and the Home Loan Bank Board.

The fact that the Government has had no previous experience in cooperative housing was advanced by Monsignor O'Grady to support his suggestion of a separate Government office to administer the act. He argued that this is a "new type of service that cannot be easily administered by the established agencies of the Government, because they are set in different patterns."

David L. Krooth a Witness

David L. Krooth of the National Housing Conference, Inc., a nonprofit organization, was another witness.

"We believe this program requires a form of organization which is of the same dignity and status as the Federal Housing Administration, the Public Housing Administration, and the Federal Home Loan Bank Administration," Krooth said.

Rents soared from 16.2 to 41.3 percent in six large cities where Federal controls were junked under local option provisions of the 1941 Rent Act, Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods disclosed yesterday.

Backing up President Truman's request for another year of controls, Woods said a Bureau of Labor Statistics survey shows rents rose quickly, steeply, and apparently continuously in Dallas and Houston, Tex.; Topeka, Kans.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Salt Lake City, and Jacksonville, Fla.

"It appears significant," he commented, "that the longer a city has been decontrolled, the more general the rent rise."

"This would seem to belie the contentions of opponents of rent control that when a city is decontrolled prematurely rents will rise at first, then level off and even drop."

Woods' announcement will be studied carefully in Congress, where sentiment has not jelled either for or against extension.

His study showed the highest percentage of increases and the biggest dollar boosts were in Dallas which, on June 23, 1949, became the first large city to decontrol itself.

Between that date and November, when the survey was made, rents were hiked for 67 percent of the units free to rise. On a monthly basis, the increases averaged $13.65, or 35.4 percent.

In Houston, decontrolled October 19 by State legislative action, rents were raised for 31 percent of the affected units in one month. The monthly increase average $12.65, or 41.3 percent.

"While both cities are in the same State, Dallas had been decontrolled five months and Houston only one month when the survey was made," Woods said.

Woods said the survey also disclosed the biggest percentage of increases in the six cities was in the units renting for less than $30 a month. The percentage was lowest in the units ranging from $50 upward.

Caucus Asked In Rules Fight

ported bill if the Rules group keeps it pigeonholed for 21 days.

With a coalition of Southerners and Republicans in the saddle the Rules Committee last week voted nine to two for a resolution repealing the reform, and giving the committee most of its old pigeonholeing powers back.

The final decision is up to the House, but leaders plainly feared that Republicans voting almost solidly with Southern opponents of FEPC and other civil rights measures would revive the old coalition barrier to the Truman "Fair Deal."

Speaker Rayburn is understood to have advised the President that the vote may be extremely close. In other quarters it was said that Mr. Truman may publicly oppose the repeal drive at his Thursday press conference.

Rayburn's Position Unchanged

The Speaker told newsmen his position is unchanged from last year, when he supported the 21-day rule.

As chairman of the Rules Committee, Sabath is required to report the proposed rules change to the House by Wednesday, even though he opposes it. He then can wait seven legislative days before calling it up for a House vote.

Meanwhile the 21-day rule may get its last workout next Monday—a special "discharge" day, when committee chairmen can move to call up blockaded bills. House Labor Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.) has served notice he will move to call up on that day the fair employment practices bill, which helped touch off the Rules Committee rebellion. Rayburn has never said whether or not he will "recognize" Lesinski. Other "discharge" motions, including one to call up the Administration's national science bill, will be presented on the same day. As between competing chairmen, the Speaker alone determines which shall have the floor.

Sabath Seeks Vote Today

At least an effort will be made to take Rayburn off the FEPC spot when the Rules Committee meets today. Rules Chairman Sabath said he will move for an FEPC committee vote shortly after his committee convenes this morning. Observers thought there was a remote chance of moving the FEPC measure directly to the floor if Sabath can force a roll call of his committee.

House Republicans meanwhile prepared to air the whole rules controversy from a party standpoint at a general House GOP conference on Wednesday. Representative Charles A. Halleck (R., Ind.), who opposed the 21-day rule when it was originally adopted last session, predicted an "almost solid" Republican front against it. Only 49 Republicans voted for it last year.

Five of the seven original Democratic adherents of the rules reform meanwhile conferred with Representative Eberharter on "strategy" and sent Eberharter and Kirwan to confer with the Speaker.

They were Representatives Chet Holifield (Calif.), John A. Carroll (Colo.), Mike Mansfield (Mont.), Walter K. Granger (Utah) and Eberharter. Sabath and Kirwan, the other two members of the 21-day rule team, later received a "fill in" on the meeting.

The Rules committee meanwhile sat through another morning of hearings on the FEPC bill, this time hearing only the opponents. Sabath said an opportunity for further testimony will be given this morning.

Opposition witnesses yesterday included Representatives John Rankin (D., Miss.), Tom Steed (D., Okla.) and Charles E. Bennett (D., Fla.).

Rankin called it "dangerous . . . communist legislation." Steed argued it was "the most discriminating bill ever written. And Bennett said it was designed to get votes rather than help the Negro.

Theft Suspect Drops Dead After Shooting Sleuth

Robinson, Ill., Jan. 16 (AP).—Harry D. Taylor, 54-year-old postoffice janitor, dropped dead from excitement and over-exertion during a shooting here last night.

Coroner Troy Pulliam said an autopsy performed late today showed Taylor's death was due to acute heart failure, and not to any blows he may have received in the fray.

Taylor collapsed shortly after he shot and beat two postal inspectors who said they caught him in the act of robbing the mails.

One of the inspectors, James A. Thompson, 60, of Springfield, Ill., was shot twice in the chest with a .45-caliber pistol. His condition tonight was critical.

The other inspector, J. J. Scherer of Effingham, was badly beaten about the head. His condition was serious.

Lincoln to Decide Soon On Race Against Taft

Murray Lincoln said yesterday he will decide "very soon" whether to seek the Democratic nomination in a bid for the U. S. Senate seat of Robert A. Taft, Ohio Republican.

Lincoln, a Columbus insurance man, told reporters that at present the situation regarding Taft's November opponent "is in a very great state of flux." The filing deadline is February 1.

Jackson Assails Clark Secrecy On Evidence in War Bride Case

without disclosing the evidence. He declared an alien is admitted to this country as a privilege, not as a right.

But Jackson called the action "abrupt and brutal" and said the husband "must abandon his bride to live in his own country or forsake his country to live with his bride." He concluded:

"I should direct the Attorney General either to produce his evidence justifying exclusion or to admit Mrs. Knauff to the country."

Jackson pointed out that "we never tire of citing" the writ of habeas corpus, applied for in this case by the husband, "as the unanswerable evidence that our free country permits no arbitrary official detention." He declared "security is like liberty in that many are the crimes committed in its name."

Frankfurter, in a separate dissent, argued that Congress "ought not to be made to appear," by the action of the courts, "to require" that wives of American soldiers "run the more hazardous gantlet of an informer's tale without any opportunity for its refutation, especially since considerations of national security, insofar as they are pertinent, can be amply protected by a hearing in camera."

The Supreme Court also:

1. By a 4-to-3 vote (on the same division as in the Knauff case) upheld the Government's right to deport two aliens who had lost their citizenship. One, Otto A. Willumeit, was a one time leader in the German-American Bund and the other, Richard Eichenlaub, was a former New York restaurant owner convicted of having conspired to act as a German agent without being registered as a foreign agent.

2. Refused to consider attacks by the AFL's Teamsters on a Florida law that restricts picketing to the immediate premises of an employer involved in a labor dispute. The Florida Supreme Court had upheld the law in a case involving cement mixing trucks in Miami. Picketing was banned at construction jobs, building operations and other places to which concrete was delivered.

3. Ruled, 8-to-0, that the New Orleans Circuit Court properly ordered a new trial in the income-tax-evasion case of J. Baker Bryan, sr., of Jacksonville, Fla., convicted in an earlier trial. The new trial was ordered after the first verdict was thrown out for a lack of sufficient evidence.

4. Agreed to hear Colonial Air Lines' attack on the United States-Canadian agreement that gave a Canadian line rights to a route Colonial had had exclusively.

Way Cleared For Pressman Union Inquiry

The House Labor Committee cleared the way yesterday for a renewal of an investigation of the International Pressmen's Union.

Rebuffing its chairman, Representative Lesinski (D., Mich.), the committee voted 10 to 6 to reinstate three subcommittees that he had abolished late in the last session of Congress on the grounds that they had completed their work.

One of these was a subcommittee headed by Representative Jacobs (D., Ind.), which had delved into the pressmen's union and the financial affairs of its former international president, the late George Berry.

Immediately after the committee had acted, Jacobs told reporters he planned to reopen the hearings.

He said he also intended to press for approval of a $42,000 expense request now before the House Administration Committee to finance the hearings and provide a staff.

The Washington local of the pressmen—the union's largest—is seeking an accounting of Berry's estate and asking determination of charges that union funds were improperly included in Berry's private estate.

Members said that Lesinski and several other members refrained from participating in the 10-6 vote to reinstate the subcommittees.

In addition to the Jacobs subcommittees, a general labor subcommittee headed by Representative Kelley (D., Pa.), and an education subcommittee under Representative Barden (D., N. C.), also were reinstated.

It was Barden's education subcommittee that touched off the dispute over Federal aid to education by approving a bill excluding parochial and private schools from Federal participation.

Ship's Master Unaware It Hit Sub, He Declares

Chatham, Eng., Jan. 16 (AP).—Capt. Carl Hommerberg, whose Swedish tanker Divina sank the British submersible Truculent Thursday, did not know he had struck a submarine, he said today.

It was an hour and 20 minutes before the Royal Navy received word of the disaster that took the lives of 64 of the 79 men aboard the Truculent, the navy said. Only 15 men survived.

In the meantime, a yet unknown number of the submarine's crew, who got out through escape hatches, drowned in the cold tidal waters of the Thames Estuary.

Hommerberg told reporters "We all thought we had been in collision with some kind of surface vessel and there would be survivors swimming in the water . . . We launched a boat and threw out lifebelts.

"The Truculent survivors we picked up were not in any fit state to talk, and for a long time we continued our rescue operations without realizing that it was a submarine we had been in collision with."

VA Mails First GI Refunds, Hopes to Finish Job June 30

By the United Press

The first of some 14 million war veterans received their GI insurance refunds yesterday.

And some ran right into trouble.

Willie M. Howard, 24-year-old unemployed laborer, one of the first Capital veterans to get his check, couldn't cash it because his duplicate discharge certificate wasn't in order.

After two banks and the Treasury rejected his identification, the local Veterans' Administration office got busy and the Treasury finally redeemed the voucher.

Howard said his $1,1.50 sure was welcome.

Officials said they doubted that many veterans will have trouble. Most of them will be known personally to their banks and merchants. If not, their discharge certificate should see them through.

Any veteran who does run into difficulties might follow Howard's lead and appeal to his local VA office.

The checks delivered by the mailman yesterday represented the first installment on a GI insurance refund totaling $2,800,000,000. The bulk of the program will be completed by June 30.

The refunds range from 60 cents to a top of $528. They were ordered because GI insurance benefits are running far behind original estimates, resulting in a surplus.

Education Aid Compromise To Be Sought

The House Labor Committee yesterday voted to start consideration of the controversial Senate-passed school aid bill on February 6 and stay with it until a measure is ready for House consideration.

The bill, which has lain bottled up for months in the committee, authorizes Federal grants of 300 hundred million dollars a year to help the States pay teachers' salaries and other school operating expenses.

The motion to consider the bill was made by Representative Cleveland M. Bailey (D., W. Va.) and was adopted 17 to 3.

The committee's decision to take up the bill was interpreted as a victory for members seeking to end dispute over aid to parochial schools by a half-way approach.

The group would take up the Senate bill as a basis for agreement but also propose an amendment which would set aside a percentage of aid for parochial school bus service in those States whose laws now specifically prohibit it.

Bailey's resolution binds the committee to meet daily "until final determination of this matter has been made."

The committee agreed to get legislation on a number of other subjects out of the way between now and February 6. These subjects include a labor extension service, mine safety and welfare, a public library demonstration service, a community recreation program, aid to the physically handicapped, and amendments to the Vocational Rehabilitation Act.

Personal Loan Interest Limited in Walter Bill

Representative Walter (D., Pa.) proposed yesterday a Federal law to limit the interest rate on personal loans to 3 percent a month.

"There is an obvious need for this legislation," Walter said in introducing a bill. "There is a growing . . . evidence . . . that large numbers of pepole are being victimized by excessive rates of interest charged in the making of personal loans."

In some cases, he said, interest rates as high as 50 percent have been charged.

Acreage Plans Under Fire of House Group

Wheat, peanut and cotton farmers are complaining about the reductions in acreage that they must make this year in order to be eligible for price supports.

So the House Agriculture Committee yesterday met to work out a more equitable system than that in the bill authored by Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. M.) in the last session.

The committee agreed that no state should be given a greater reduction in peanut acreage than the average reduction for the entire country. This, according to Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.) is to benefit Alabama.

The average cut in peanut acreage is 20.1 percent. But the cut would amount to more than 30 percent in Alabama.

A proposal by Representative Clifford R. Hope (R., Kans.) to reduce the cut in wheat acreage to give more to Western Kansas farmers, where summer fallowing is practiced, was dropped at Hope's request. Hope wants further discussion with wheat experts at the Agriculture Department.

The committee will take up the study of cotton acreage today.

Chapman Appointment Okayed by Committee

President Truman's nomination of Oscar Chapman as Secretary of the Interior won unanimous approval from the Senate Interior Committee yesterday.

The Senate is expected to give quick confirmation.

Chapman was named to the $22,500-a-year post on December 1 to succeed J. A. (Cap) Krug, who resigned without confirming or denying reports of a behind-the-scenes split with President Truman.

Nationalists Bomb Reds' Invasion Fleet

Taipei, Formosa, Jan. 16 (AP).—The Chinese Nationalists announced today one of the heaviest air attacks of the civil war had smashed many Communist vessels massed for intended invasion of Hainan and other Nationalist islands.

The official report said more than 100 planes did extensive damage Sunday to Red junks along the Liuchow Peninsula, nearest the big island of Hainan.

It said other Nationalist air forces today sank many troop-laden Communist junks near Weichow, a small island 40 miles west of the Liuchow Peninsula.

The Nationalist defense ministry reported an overwater artillery exchange was in progress on the southeast coast between Reds on the mainland near Swaton and Nationalists or Namoa Island, 9 miles offshore.

The Communists established a beachhead on Namoa two days ago, but the Nationalist report today made no mention of fighting on the island itself. It did say 3000 Reds were beaten off in an attempt to land on Linting islet, midway between Namoa and the mainland.

The ministry also reported renewed conflict on the mainland. It said Nationalist and Communist regulars were fighting near Feichieh and Funing, in southwest Kwangsi and southeast Yunnan provinces.

In the political field, Philip Jessup, roving American Ambassador, conferred for an hour and a half tonight with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

What they discussed was not disclosed but it was believed Chiang told Jessup he could hold Formosa with limited aid and appealed for further funds to stabilize the island economy.

To Industrialize

Egypt Plans Bigger Army, Free Schools

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 16 (U.P.).—Premier Mustapha el Nahas Pasha said today his new Wafdist government will build up the army, end martial law, industrialize the country and eliminate illiteracy by making primary and secondary schools free.

Delivering the King's speech on the opening day of Parliament, the 74-year-old premier also announced his government will demand "speedy evacuation" of British troops from the Suez Canal zone and Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Nahas said Parliament shortly will be asked to approve a bill lifting the martial law imposed during the war in Palestine. But according to the best available information this will not necessarily mean the end of censorship.

Nahas disclosed censorship of the Egyptian press already has been lifted but Arabic press reports said a special office may be created to pass on incoming and outgoing press dispatches.

Shortly after the opening of Parliament, the Wafdist government announced police have been ordered to ban all demonstrations.

As a start on its new program, Nahas said, the government has begun to release political internees.

Primary, secondary and technical schools will be free to all students effective today, he said

Bitter Cold Cuts Finnish Vote...

COLD WAVE—HOT ELECTION—Arctic gales and 22-below-zero temperatures meant light voting yesterday in Finland's presidential election. Only 30-35 percent of the 2,500,000 eligible voters went to the polls, observers said, but Finns will have another chance to vote today for electors who next month will name a President. Juho Paasikivi, incumbent (left) is expected to be reelected, although he faces stiff competition from Dr. Urho Kekkonen (center), Agrarian Party candidate, and former Premier Mauno Pekkala (right), backed by the Communists

Advocates of Atlantic Union Gather for Sessions Here

A group of prominent citizens, headed by former Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts, will meet here today and Wednesday to rally support for the Atlantic Union resolution pending in the Senate.

The resolution calls for an international convention of the 12 North Atlantic Security Pact nations to "explore the possibility" of creating a federal union of democratic countries.

A Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee headed by Senator Elbert Thomas (D., Utah) plans to hold public hearings soon on the resolution and other proposals, such as the World Federalist plan, for moves toward world government.

Roberts said his group hopes to arrange a meeting with President Truman and with key members of the Senate and House Foreign Relations Committees.

Others in the Atlantic Union delegation will include Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.); Mayor Howard Houston of Meriden, Conn.; Dr. Daniel Poling, Philadelphia clergyman; Henry E. Atwood, Minneapolis banker; Dr. John W. Nason, president of Swarthmore College, Swarthmore, Pa.; Dr. James McCain, president of the State University of Montana, Missoula; Dr. J. A. MacLachlan of Harvard Law School; James J. O'Neil, Manchester, N. Schuman Asks Security Pact For Germany

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, Jan. 16 (NYHT).—French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, in his first postwar visit to Berlin, today urged that the United States, Britain and France hand a joint statement to the West German government guaranteeing its security against aggression.

He denied, however, that he had given any unilateral security promises to Chancellor Konrad Adenauer at Bonn.

At a reception in Schuman's honor in the French sector, the Foreign Minister told reporters he had merely reiterated to Chancellor Adenauer his conviction that so long as the three powers continue their occupation they are committed to protecting West Germany against any possible aggression.

But in light of the West German worries on the security score, Schuman thought it would be only "logical and sensible" for the Western powers to come out in a joint statement that would publicly reaffirm their sense of responsibility for the defense of the German federal republic.

There is no doubt Schuman's visit here will be a high point of postwar French-German rapprochement.

To Berliners the climax came when in an address to Berlin officials at the City Hall, the French Foreign Minister, who speaks fluent German, declared: "Let me express here in the name of the French nation the hope the unnecessary misunderstandings and conflicts of the last 100 years are overcome and that France and Germany not only become good neighbors but also friends with the same aims and ideas. By my presence in Berlin I hope to prove that the French government sincerely means to stand by its firm policy in Berlin—a city that more than any other town on earth has played a crucial part in the East-West war of nerves."

A diplomatic reception in the French sector tonight was attended by both Western and Russian officials. The latter, it was noted, drew up resplendently in bright new 1950 Buicks.

U. S. Expects Australian Plea For Anti-Red Actions in Asia

attacks on the Administration's policies toward China. But sharpened attacks are almost sure to come in view of the Chinese Communist seizure of American consular properties over the weekend.

Other U. S. Properties There

Some officials here feared that the Peiping seizures were by no means the end of the story. They remembered that the United States still had about 11 million dollars' worth of buildings and furniture in several Communist-controlled cities.

The United States acquired or built these premises as part payment for surplus war material furnished to Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist government. Now that the Communists have torn up treaties and seized the American properties in Peiping, it would be no surprise if they did the same toward American official properties elsewhere.

Even the British, who recognized Communist China earlier this month, were reported anxious yesterday over the safety of their official property in Peiping. They recognized the Communist regime without getting any advance assurances as to the safety of their property or their citizens in Red China.

French and Dutch Protest

Both France and the Netherlands, whose official property was also seized, drafted vigorous protests to the Chinese Communists yesterday.

When all American officials have been withdrawn from China it will be the first time in more than a hundred years that the United States has been without representation there. The United States has had some officials in China ever since 1844, through all the revolutions and crises of a century.

But at least a month, and perhaps more, will elapse before the officials now in China can be evacuated. State Department Press Officer Michael J. McDermott said yesterday that Communist regulations require "one full month's notice" to Chinese employes of consulates before they are laid off.

Many Tasks to Be Done

"Our consulates also must have time to pack records and other property, arrange storage and shipment, inventory property to be turned over to the British for safekeeping, and secure exit visas," he said.

Some American officials have had to wait months for their exit visas to get out of Communist China, and there was no way of knowing yesterday whether the Communists would try to hamper the impending departures in the same way. Final evacuation plans probably will not be made until the Americans are almost ready to leave.

O'Conor Seeks Formal Non-Recognition Notice

Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.) last night called for a formal announcement by the State Department "that the United States has no intention, now or in the future," of recognizing the Communist regime in China.

Denouncing the seizure of the United States Consulate in Peiping by Chinese Communist forces as "outrageous," O'Conor said:

"To accord recognition to a regime which operates solely along banditry lines would degrade the United States in the eyes of the whole world."

The Maryland Democrat also urged:

1. Every possible effort by the State Department to prevent seating of the Communist China regime in the United Nations.

2. Full diplomatic and economic relations with Spain, "which wants to be our friend, and wants to be part of the Western Democratic family of anti-Communist nations."

French Retail Mission Sees Area Stores

Heads of six French retail associations yesterday toured Washington stores and shopping centers and today will exchange ideas with Washington retailers, Government and civic officials.

They are to be guests at the Mayflower Hotel today at a luncheon to be given by Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager of the Hecht Co.

Yesterday, in addition to their tour, they were guests at a reception at the French Embassy.

The delegation, which already has visited Boston, New York and Philadelphia, is headed by M. Lacour-Gayet, president of the French National Federation of Department and Variety Chain stores.

Other members of the delegation include Louis Rollin, former French Minister of Commerce; George Maus, president of the National Association of French Retailers; Jean Demoge, vice president of the National Association of General Stores, and Robert Marcy and Michael Jarre of the National Federation of Department Stores.

The group is examining Washington area store operations for ideas they might adopt in their own country.

At today's luncheon they will be advised on governmental cooperation with the retail industry by H. B. McCoy, director of the Office of Domestic Commerce, and Wayne C. Taylor, assistant administrator of the Economic Cooperation Administration.

Pope Better After Slip Sprains Leg Ligament

Vatican City, Jan. 16 (U.P.).—A high Vatican source reported today that Pope Pius was slightly injured in a minor accident three weeks ago but has fully recovered.

The source said the 74-year-old pontiff sprained a ligament in his left leg when he slipped in his apartments.

He added the Pope is now taking his customary daily walks in the Vatican garden.

Russia). India abstained. The representative of China was absent on the vote: Belgium, Brazil, France, Peru, Britain and the United States voted for the chairman's ruling.

Russia's N. I. Klimov made the same proposal in the committee on stateless persons and was supported by Alexander Rudzinski of Poland. The vote against them was 6 (Canada, Brazil, China, Venezuela, United States and Turkey) to 2 (Russia and Poland), with 3 (Britain, Denmark, and Israel) abstaining. The last three countries have recognized the Red Chinese regime, but Britain has said the issue of Chinese representation here is premature.

V. I. Formashev, Russia, and Joseph Winiewicz, Polish Ambassador to the United States, walked out of the subcommission, although members of this group sit as individual experts and not as representatives of their governments.

Joao Carlos Muniz, Brazilian Ambassador to the U. N., was elected chairman of the Little Assembly. Abdur Rahim Khan, Pakistan, was named vice chairman and Joseph Nisot, Belgium, committee reporter.

Arms Aid Pacts, 2 Months Behind, To Be Ready Soon

By The Associated Press

America's billion-dollar arms program for Europe is expected to clear the paper-writing stage next week—two months behind schedule.

This was disclosed yesterday by a Government official who forecast that separate arms aid agreements with eight Western European countries will be ready for signing then.

At the same time, President Truman is expected to announce his approval of the secret master plan worked out earlier for defending the North Atlantic area against possible Russian attacks.

Both these steps are required by Congress before actual shipments of arms to America's North Atlantic allies can begin.

ties without consulting the owner.

Adenauer spoke after a conference yesterday with French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman at which, he said, they disagreed on "many points."

"In many points we agreed," he added.

Schuman told a news conference there would be no change in the political status of the Saar until a peace treaty with Germany is concluded.

That view coincided with the views of Adenauer who declared on Saturday a solution of the Saar question should be left for the peace treaty. He declared efforts to reach a one-sided solution now would present Germany with an accomplished fact which would give Russia a better excuse to detach Eastern Germany at the Oder-Niesse line.

The Saar, by agreement of the British and American Foreign Ministers though without Soviet concurrence, now has a special status under French occupation. It has its own local German government elected in 1947 and is not represented either in the Bonn or Paris Parliaments.

France has integrated the 738-square mile territory, with its estimated nine-million-ton coal reserves, into her customs system, however, and seek to bind it in other ways with her economy.

After the First World War its coal mines were given to France as compensation for destruction on her northern coal mines. But Germany bought back the mines after the Saarlanders voted overwhelmingly in 1935 to discard their government under a League of Nations commission and return to Germany.

Today Adenauer declared the mines belong to the West German Republic because its constitution, approved by the Western powers, declares all property of the former German Reich belongs to the Bonn government.

Adenauer said he opposed more independence for the Saar than it enjoys at present if that meant "the Saar should be severed from Germany."

Concentration Camps Closing, Russians Say

Berlin, Jan. 16 (AP).—Russia announced tonight that she is washing her hands of all concentration camps in eastern Germany, where at least 29,649 prisoners are being held.

Fifteen thousand will be turned loose at once, but 14,000 will be turned over to the East German government.

Gen. Vassilly Chuikov, chief of the Soviet Control Commission, in a letter to Acting Prime Minister Walter Ulbricht of the East German government, named three former Nazi concentration camps where Soviet administration will be liquidated. They were Buchenwald, Sachsenhausen and Bautzen.

The Russians never have admitted the existence of concentration camps in Eastern Germany. They called them internment camps.

The announcement meant the East German government will operate some of the camps and accept responsibility for them.

Chuikov's letter said 10,500 prisoners "convicted by war tribunals" would be turned over to East Germany for safekeeping at Bautzen.

Another 3500 will be turned over to East German authorities for "investigation of criminal activities," the announcement said, while 649 will be kept by the Russians because of their "grave crimes against the Soviet Union."

This made a total of 29,649. Western German estimates of prisoners in the camps have ranged from 30,000 to 36,000.

House Probers Fix Dates to Summon Wallace, Groves

By The Associated Press

The House Un-American Activities Committee decided yesterday to question former Vice President Henry A. Wallace and Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves late this month in its investigation of reported wartime uranium shipments to Russia.

The committee's decision was made known by Representative Nixon (R., Calif.).

Wallace requested a public hearing after Radio Commentator Fulton Lewis, jr., mentioned his name in discussing reported shipments to Russia. The committee has invited Wallace to testify on January 24 and General Groves on January 25.

Franco Seeking Soviet Trade

Madrid, Jan. 16 (AP).—Arch anti-Communist Generalissimo Franco is reliably reported to be trying to do business with Russia because the Western powers won't deal with him.

Usually well-informed sources today said Spanish representatives in Cairo and Paris are negotiating a multimillion-dollar barter agreement. The deal would provide for a swap of Spanish mercury, wolfram, olive oil and wines for Russian wheat and petroleum products.

The informants said Spain was forced to separate her economic policy from her political policy of ardent anticommunism because of the complete breakdown of her trade agreement with Argentina and the United States' unwillingness to give Spain a dollar loan on easy terms.

Spain has staved off famine since the end of the civil war mostly with wheat shipped from Argentina on credit. Last month Argentine President Juan D. Peron told Franco he had his own money troubles and couldn't keep up the unpaid shipments.

When the Argentine shipments lagged, Spain was forced to spend the last eight million dollars of a 25-million-dollar loan from New York's Chase National Bank to buy wheat in the United States and Canada.

Bell X-1 Does 'Rolls' At Supersonic Speed

New Army Plan

Gray Orders Support for Racial Policy

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Army Secretary Gordon Gray yesterday ordered all top Army generals to see that a newly adopted racial policy be given "unreserved acceptance" in their commands.

He made public the text of a new special regulation, entitled "Utilization of Negro Manpower in the Army," setting forth the new policy. As reported last week in The Washington Post, it provides for the assignment of Negro specialists to white troop units—in limited numbers at first—and the eventual abolition of segregation over a long-range period.

The new regulation replaces a four-year-old Army circular which provided for continuation of strictly segregated troop units.

Gray listed 40 "critical specialties" in which vacancies now exist in white units and told commanders to assign qualified Negroes to fill them.

He also told the top commanders that they must "insure that all personnel under their command are thoroughly oriented in the unreserved acceptance of the provisions of these policies."

"Commanders of organizations or installations containing Negro personnel will be responsible for the execution of these policies," Gray directed, stating that the orders were designed to further President Truman's executive order of July 25, 1948, calling for equality of treatment and opportunity for all races in the armed forces.

The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics reported yesterday that the Bell X-1 airplane has performed "rolls"—turned upside down and back again—while flying at transsonic and supersonic speeds.

In the thirty-fifth annual report to Congress, the NACA—top Government research agency—also indicated it has evidence that Russia is working hard to develop high-speed, long-range planes to deliver atomic bombs.

The report, signed by Chairman Jerome C. Hunsaker, said the committee "feels a sense of urgency" in carrying on its own air power research.

"We must accept the view that flight at supersonic speeds by practical military airplanes can be attained by any nation willing to make the effort," said the report.

The disclosure that the X-1 had "rolled" at and above the speed of sound indicates that considerable progress has been made in developing effective control of aircraft at such speeds, officials said.

Discussing the flight tests with research airplanes at Muroc Air Force Base, Calif., the NACA stated:

"Measurement of the general aerodynamic characteristics and aileron effectiveness of the X-1 airplane was continued. Data have also been obtained for rudder-fixed aileron rolls, during glides, at high Mach numbers."

In everyday language, said a NACA spokesman, this means that the X-1 has performed rolls at and above the speed of sound—which travels at 760 mph. at sea level.

Hunsaker said the committee had evidence of "increasing international competition in aeronautical research."

Without mentioning Russia by name, he noted that "another nation has apparently achieved success in developing an atomic explosion," and added:

"It is logical to assume that an intensive effort is being made to develop a means for transporting atomic weapons with as high a degree of effectiveness as possible and at the same time to provide defense against invading aircraft armed with atomic weapons.

"Superior speed is generally acknowledged to be the most important single element in successful air attack and in defense against such an attack. Range also is important. The attainment of long range at supersonic speeds poses a most difficult problem.

"For America to continue its present supremacy in the air will require that it develop military aircraft that can fly faster than sound. This places emphasis on research and development. As in the case of the atomic bomb, America cannot expect to enjoy an exclusive advantage."

Truman Says He Was Kicked Into High Post

By The Associated Press

President Truman, describing himself as "just a farmer from Missouri who had bad luck and got kicked into a big job," vowed yesterday that his only goal "is peace in the world."

Speaking at a private dinner of representatives of the Nation's Federal Reserve System, the President declared that he is "just an ordinary citizen" who has had to assume "the greatest responsibility in the world."

The President did not discuss his proposed tax program, which he is planning to submit to Congress soon, or any Administration fiscal proposals.

Reporters were not permitted to cover the dinner at the Carlton Hotel, attended by governors of the Federal Reserve System, district chairmen and directors of New York and Minneapolis banks.

However, the White House later made public the text of Mr. Truman's impromptu remarks, in which he asserted:

"I haven't any business to be discussing things financial with the financial brains that are before me tonight. I am just a farmer from Missouri who had bad luck and got kicked into a big job."

He said his only interest is the welfare of the United States and that the welfare of this country "is the welfare of the world."

"Whether we like it or not, we are at the top of the heap in world affairs, a position which none of us likes to contemplate, a position which has responsibilities almost too big for any man or group of men to contemplate." Mr. Truman commented.

He wanted the bankers to know, he said, that "in spite of certain information, which has been pretty well distributed, that I do not wear horns, and I haven't a tail.

"I am just an ordinary citizen of this great republic of ours, who has the greatest responsibility in the world and whose responsibility is your responsibility, and for that reason it is necessary that all of us make every effort possible to make successful the goal which we are attempting to attain," Mr. Truman said.

"And that is peace in the world—peace in Europe, peace in Asia, peace in South America, peace in Africa, peace in the Western Hemisphere, and the assumption of the leadership necessary to bring that about."

War Peril Less Than Year Ago Marshall Says

Boston, Jan. 16 (U.P.)—Gen. George C. Marshall said today the peril of an American-Russian war had lessened in the past year.

The wartime Army chief of staff and former Secretary of State said he believed "that we are in a much less dangerous situation at the present time than we were at the time of the Berlin blockade."

Discussing the Marshall Plan, he declared the 16 participating nations "have come nearer to the agreed program than we thought possible" and that the results of the first two years were "beyond expectations."

He said he did not favor extending the plan beyond the original four-year period under which it was established.

Marshall, now president of the American Red Cross, was here to attend ceremonies dedicating the thirtieth blood center set up by the Red Cross in its Nation-wide blood program.

During the dedication ceremonies, Marshall said that in case of an "unforeseen national emergency" the United States might need more blood for medical treatment in one week than it did during one year of World War II.

He did not explain what he meant by a "national emergency" but presumably referred to an atomic war.

Truman Offers 10-Year Plan For Wartime Rubber Supply

ment's synthetic rubber plants to private owners, but under conditions that would protect the national security and prevent monopolistic concentration.

Mr. Truman's report was accompanied by a detailed study prepared by his assistant, John R. Steelman. It was necessary, the President found, to build up a large stockpile of natural rubber against the threat of another war, when supplies might be cut off. But this was not enough, for it would be impractical to build up such a large—an indeterminately large—amount.

Therefore, "we must be equipped to meet the bulk of our needs from domestically produced rubber."

The way to do this would be to maintain in usable condition the present synthetic industry. That part not needed to meet current, peacetime demand should be kept in its present stand-by condition, able to go into production in an average of six months' time.

One type of synthetic rubber, butyl, is superior to natural rubber for use in inner tubes. Therefore, the report implied, it will not be too difficult to dispose of the Government plants. And once in the hands of private owners, the plants probably will produce in amounts sufficient for national defense because of natural market forces.

When that happens, no further Government fiats will be needed to specify the volume of production. But until then, Mr. Truman said, the Government should have authority to determine the minimum quantities to be produced.

Wants Power to Fix Amounts

The other, much more voluminous type of synthetic, is known as "general purpos.," or GR-S. At present this is not generally better than natural rubber, and costs more to produce.

To make sure that enough is produced, therefore, the President recommended that he have the power to say how much shall be produced, whether plants are held by the Government or privately owned. And, to make sure that it is used, he should have the right to prescribe what proportion of GR-S must be included in various rubber products.

The President's message and the Steelman report indicated the problem is a dilemma of many horns.

For the Government to abandon concern about keeping the synthetic industry in operation would be to disregard vital defense considerations. On the other hand, to keep it running at capacity would be virtually to end the market for natural rubber.

And this would wreck international trade, impoverish the natural rubber producing countries, render them vulnerable to Communist pressure, and blight British hopes of closing the dollar gap.

Private Ownership Question

Another aspect of the dilemma has to do with the question of private ownership. For the Government to continue the bulk of synthetic rubber production would be to violate the principle of free, private and competitive operation of industry.

Yet, in disposing of the plants, especially the bulk of them that make GR-S, to private owners, and at the same time requiring manufacturers of rubber products to use a certain percent of GR-S, is to open the way to price-gouging.

Without other controls, the GR-S producers could charge manufacturers any price they chose, since the law required that the latter use of specified amount of GR-S.

Yet "other controls" means, in effect, "price controls," some the Government seeks to avoid.

Danger of Monopoly

Still another aspect of the dilemma is that of monopoly. The danger exists that in disposing of the plants, the Government will strengthen the already-dominant position of the biggest operators in the rubber-producing business.

To handle some of these problems, the President's recommendations are specific, particularly in the procedure involved in the sale of plants to counteract trends toward monopoly.

To meet the other problems, the President asked Congress for flexible and discretionary authority. His hope was that ultimately, with more research and cheaper production of GR-S, the free forces of market competition would remove the need for Federal controls requiring the production and use of specific amounts.

Senate Group Holds Up Bill To Curb Reds

By the United Press

Action on the Mundt-Ferguson bill to control American Communists was postponed two weeks yesterday by the Senate Judiciary Committee, pending opinions on its constitutionality.

Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), said the group will consider the measure again January 30 after "some of the Nation's outstanding attorneys" had passed on it.

Last year the committee asked for an appraisal of a similar measure from Charles Evans Hughes, former Chief Justice of the United States; John W. Davis, one-time Democratic presidential candidate, and Donald R. Richberg, former top Federal official.

"We will ask the opinions either of those men or men of similar caliber," McCarran said.

World Bank Notes Income Of $6,672,667

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development yesterday reported a net income of $6,672,667 for the six months ended December 31 as compared with $4,804,057 for the first six months in the preceding fiscal year.

Gross income, exclusive of $2,709,416 transferred to the special reserve, amounted to $12,268,685 as compared with $10,291,345.

Total administrative expenses for the six months ended December 31 were $2,171,506. In the first half of the preceding fiscal year administrative expenses amounted to $2,062,840.

Disbursements on loans during the six months' period amounted to $40,721,716, increasing the total as of December 31, 1949, to $567,012,730.

During the six months ended December 31, 1949, the Bank made loan commitments of $94,045,000, increasing the total since the Bank began operating to $743,906,983. Allowance was made in this total for the cancellation by the Grand-Duchy of Luxembourg of $238,017 from its original loan contract.

The Bank granted a loan of 12 million dollars to Luxembourg on August 28, 1947. As a result of a determination by Luxembourg that it would not need $238,017 of the loan, the Bank was requested to agree to a cancellation of this amount, which cancellation became effective December 19, 1949.

U. S. Rests Its Case In Bridges Trial

Defense Rests

Jury to Get Hiss Case By Friday

New York, Jan. 16 (NYHT)—The defense rested at 1 p. m. today in the second perjury trial of Alger Hiss, and it was indicated the case would go to the jury by Friday afternoon.

Dr. Henry A. Murray, Harvard psychologist, completed his testimony at 12:17 p. m., repeating his opinion that Whittaker Chambers, key prosecution witness, is psychopathic. As its last witness the defense called Clark M. Eichelberger, director of the American Association for the United Nations, who said Hiss' reputation for loyalty, veracity and integrity is excellent.

Defense Counsel Claude B. Cross said he might reopen his case to present one more witness Tuesday if it turns out on further investigation that the witness has relevant evidence to offer. He did not identify the witness.

U. S. Calls 7 in Rebuttal

Thomas F. Murphy, assistant United States attorney, called seven rebuttal witnesses this afternoon, and both rebutial and surrebuttal are expected to be finished Tuesday.

After a one-day recess Wednesday, Cross will sum up in his closing argument to the jury on Thursday, followed by Murphy. Judge Henry W. Goddard will charge the jury Friday, according to the present schedule.

The last hour of testimony by Dr. Murray brought a disclosure that after a preliminary reading of the material given to him by defense counsel relating to Chambers, he had interviewed a former employe of Time magazine who had worked under Chambers in 1942.

Tries To Show Prejudice

Murphy sought to show that in this interview Dr. Murray had betrayed a prejudice against Chambers, and that he had used the information he obtained in this interview as part of the basis of his opinion. Dr. Murray had previously testified several times that his opinion was based solely on the evidence in the case as presented to him, and that he had excluded from his mind as far as possible any other information about Chambers that he had obtained elsewhere.

Dr. Murray said today his reason for interviewing the former Time employe was that he had begun to form a hypothesis about Chambers on the basis of the evidence presented to him by defense counsel, and he wanted to know if there was other information available, which might "definitely show me that my hypothesis was wrong." He added that he got "no information one way or another" out of the interview.

Dr. Murray said that within five days after the interview he received a letter from Lewis Mumford, author and lecturer who had introduced him to the former Time employe, saying the man had been visited and cross-examined by an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and was "greatly disturbed."

Most of the rebuttal testimony related to the old Woodstock typewriter on which the Government contends some of the spy papers were typed.

San Francisco, Jan. 16 (U.P.).—The Government abruptly rested its perjury-conspiracy case against longshoremen's chief Harry Bridges and two of his subordinates today and verbal fireworks were set off immediately by the defense.

Defense Attorney Vincent Hallinan shouted that the Government prosecutor is the attorney for Frank Costello, reputed kingpin of the New York underworld, and called the decision to rest "trickery."

Prosecutor F. Joseph Donohue questioned a minor witness as the thirty-sixth day of the trial opened and then startled the coutroroom by saying:

"Your honor, the Government rests."

Hallinan jumped to his feet, made some startled exclamations, and shouted:

"This decision is trickery."

"The decision to rest was made by the United States Government," Donohue replied.

"Who is the United States Government?" Hallinan challenged.

Then, after a pause, he glared at Donohue and said:

"The attorney for Frankie Costello, the New York gangster."

"Drew Pearson said so yesterday," he shouted, "and he (Donohue) comes up here and now says he represents the Government. I think Your Honor has been tricked."

Not Regular U. S. Employe

Donohue is not a regular employe of the Justice Department. A private attorney in Washington, he was hired by the department as a "special assistant to the Attorney General."

"I should not be subjected to this personal abuse and neither should Your Honor," Donohue told the judge. "I never saw Costello . . . I never met him . . . I never had any communications with him and I never represented him."

But despite Donohue's objections and warnings from District Judge George B. Harris, who already has sentenced him to six months for contempt, Hallinan read to the astonished courtroom a recent dispatch by Columnist Pearson. It said in part:

. . . "It's ironic that 'Jiggs' Donohue, who has contacts with the Maragon-Costello crowd, is now retained by the Justice Department to prosecute Bridges."

Out of court, Donohue admitted he knew John Maragon, one-time White House confidant who has been indicted for perjury in connection with the Washington five-percenter investigation. Donohue added with a shrug that "everyone in Washington" knows Maragon.

Attorneys Silenced

Judge Harris finally silenced both attorneys and instructed the jury to "ignore, erase and disregard the statement by counsel."

After the trial was recessed until 10 a. m. (P.S.T.) Tuesday, Bridges appeared to be cheerful over the Government's decision to rest its case.

Bridges is charged with lying in 1945 when he denied at a naturalization hearing that he was or ever had been a Communist. The president of the CIO International Longshoreman's and Warehouseman's Union faces deportation to his native Australia if convicted.

He is on trial with J. R. Robertison and Henry Schmidt, both high-ranking officers of the union, which includes 75,000 West Coast dock workers. All three face prison terms if found guilty.

The Government has failed in two previous attempts to deport Bridges when the United States Supreme Court ruled there was not sufficient evidence to indicate he was a Communist.

Rescue Crew Nears Second Trapped Miner

Mahanoy City, Pa., Jan. 16 (AP).—Inch by inch, weary rescue workers dug deeper into the debris of an anthracite mine today clinging to a fading hope of finding, still alive, a 25-year-old miner buried in a cavein Friday.

Chances of Edward Burda's survival 120 feet underground are one in a hundred, veteran miners admit. But the dogged and dangerous search for him goes on, every worker remembering that Burda's brother Joseph, 30, was rescued early Sunday.

Clawing at the rock and coal with compressed air drills, picks and even their bare fingers, the rescuers were making painfully slow headway.

The diggers were driving a 3-foot shaft at a 60-degree angle into Broad Mountain, where the five Burda brothers operate a small independent mine.

About 18 feet from the bottom of the 120-foot mine the rescue workers found the end of a rope which they thought was attached to a mine car used by Burda.

They believed they might be able to reach him by tonight or early Tuesday, as they made faster progress in the anthracite formation. Progress was stepped up to about 2 feet an hour from 1 foot.

Highest Court Blocks Coplon New Trial Plea

The Supreme Court yesterday refused even to consider Judith Coplon's plea that a new trial be ordered in her conviction for espionage here last summer. A similar appeal is pending before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals here.

The Coplon plea was based on the argument that she was convicted on evidence gathered by illegal wire-tapping.

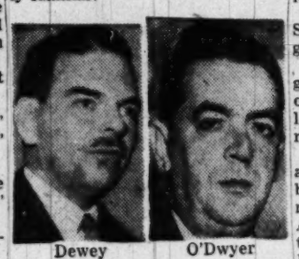
"The mayor's proposal is apparently to legalize gambling on professional and amateur sports. Obviously, if the State puts the imprimatur of approval on the morals and decency of wholesale, universal betting on sports events of every kind, then there would be no logic whatever in refusing also legalize lotteries, betting pools, dice games, slot machines and public gambling halls with all their attendant evils with which the American people are thoroughly familiar."



Dewey O'Dwyer

"There is no logical place at which the line could be drawn and law enforcement would then break down completely," he said.

Dewey said the mayor's proposal would involve licensing by the State of betting rooms, scattered in convenient locations. He said these legal betting rooms would provide "a continuous invitation under the sponsorship of the State to husbands and wives to gamble away the money needed for the support of the family."

"I cannot understand how anyone could relish the prospect of seeing husbands spend their time and the family's money in State-operated betting rooms," the Governor said.

Effect on Children Seen

"The prospect is no prettier in its inducement to wives and mothers and even children. What this proposal would do to the fabric of our society is quite difficut fully to comprehend but it is clearly all bad."

Dewey said gambling on professional sports had had a demoralizing influence on American sporting events.

He said baseball pools nearly wrecked the national game several times.

He said there had been scandals in horseracing, boxing, and other sports.

"Millions of dollars would be involved if betting were legalized on high school and college basketball, baseball and football games, on track meets, hockey games and other events," the Governor continued.

"These huge sums collected under the sponsorship of the State would provide unlimited funds to professional gamblers to seek to bribe the youth of the State," he said.

Referring to gambling in other nations, Dewey pointed out that in most of them the people are poverty-stricken and the governments are in bad financial condition.

The Governor said gambling was widspread in the United States in the early days, but, he continued, corruption and poverty flourished "to such an extent that in State after State the people themselves revolted against gambling and established stringent constitutional provisions against it."

New York was one of the first States, if not the first, to outlaw gambling, Dewey said.

The Governor said organized gambling would spawn the rise of powerful underworld figures leading to gang wars, murder, corruption and poverty.

Dewey pointed to several examples in other States where gambling was legalized and said the results were "unfortunate." Among the States which had trouble with legalized gambling, Dewey said, were Florida, Idaho and Montana.

In Florida and Idaho the gambling laws were repealed, Dewey said, while both the Governor and Attorney General of Montana said the condition of the State was worse than it had been before gambling was legalized.

Recalls Prosecutions

The Governor pointed out that he had had considerable experience in dealing with bigtime gamblers. He recalled that he prosecuted a case based on the charge that the "Dutch" Schultz gang, "with money raised from the illegal numbers racket, acquired the influence which allowed them in 1933 through a political leader in the County of New York to name and elect the district attorney of New York County."

"I also know that with proper leadership and honorable administration of criminal justice, those conditions need never exist," Dewey added.

"The entire history of legalized gambling in this country and abroad shows that it has brought nothing but poverty, crime and corruption, demoralization of moral and ethical standards and ultimately a lower living standard and misery for all the people."

"I am unalterably opposed to the poposal which has been made by the Mayor of the City of New York," Dewey said.

This was one of the longest messages Dewey has ever sent to the Legislature. It also was one of the bitterest.

Shapiro Denies Helping FBI Investigate Judith Coplon

Shapiro, who was not a witness at her Washington trial let the FBI listen in on date-making conversations between the two and that the FBI put him up to dating her so that he could find out if she and Gubitchev were engaged in spying for Russia. Her Washington trial was on charges of removal of Justice Department documents.

Shapiro, in the Justice Department's criminal division since April, 1948, testified he first met Miss Coplon, then a Justice Department analyst, when she returned from Europe in September, 1948. That was the same month she met Gubitchev.

The near-sighted witness said he was unaware that his phone talks with the 1943 Barnard honor graduate were tapped. He said he had no knowledge that she was allegedly involved in espionage and that the first he knew that her wires were tapped was when he read it in the newspapers. He added he had "some suspicion" of the interceptions.

When FBI agents questioned him the day after her arrest, Shapiro testified, he assumed they got his name from Miss Coplon. A few days later, he said, he went to see Raymond P. Whearty, first assistant in the criminal division and one of the prosecutors in Washington and here. He did that, he explained, because "I was a friend of hers and I also wanted to know what had happened." In Washington, Miss Coplon testified that even though hotel registers showed they had registered as "Mr. and Mrs. Shapiro," their relations were platonic.

"Did you go to see Whearty to exculpate yourself?" Mr. Palmer asked the witness.

"I wasn't involved — I had nothing to exculpate myself about. I told him (Whearty) she was a very close friend of mine. I said possibly the whole thing could be a mistake."

At one point, Palmer whipped a maroon tie out of a tie box and challenged Shapiro with these questions:

"Didn't you, just before Christmas, 1948, go with Judy and a lady lawyer whose initial is 'M' to assist in buying a loud tie for a Russian Judy said she was going to meet in New York? Didn't Miss Coplon say she wanted to get a loud tie like you wear and the Russian had a taste for loud ties? Didn't the tie cost $5?

Judge Sylvester Ryan interposed an objection to these questions and when Palmer offered the maroon tie in evidence it was disallowed because it was not the one that Miss Coplon allegedly bought. This, Palmer said, was a duplicate, bought from the same store.

"I'd like to make judicial notice," Judge Ryan said, "that the witness is wearing a comber necktie." It was a knitted blue tie, worn on a button-down white shirt under a blue suit with shadow strips.

"This may be a somber occasion," Palmer retorted.

21 More Frenchmen Expelled From Poland

Warsaw, Poland, Jan. 16 (AP).—Poland expelled 21 French citizens today. This brings to 45 the number of Frenchmen kicked out of Poland since mid-November.

Among those ejected today was Pierre Marschal, correspondent of the French News Agency.

Area Legislators Introduce 17 Bills

Clarke, Fenwick

2 Senators Assigned to 9 Committees

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Jan. 16.—Legislators from nearby Washington in the Virginia General Assembly introduced 17 bills today in their busiest session since convening Wednesday.

In the House of Delegates, Arlington's representatives asked for a general reassessment of property this year and "at least every fourth year thereafter."

Another proposal made by Delegates J. Maynard Magruder and George Damm seeks to relieve the county from undue strain on its treasury during one year in paying off bonded indebtedness.

Senator Andrew W. Clarke of Alexandria and Fairfax County, introduced a bill which would double the present $1200 annual salary of members of the Fairfax Board of Supervisors. It would also give them 6 cents a mile for travel to and from board meetings.

Most of today's activity affecting the Washington area, however, was centered in the Senate.

Senator Clarke introduced other bills which would:

REQUIRE the apartment house operators in Fairfax supply the Board of Supervisors before February 1 of each year with a list of tenants' names and addresses if they occupy a building with two or more apartments.

PERMIT the county to borrow money from the Virginia retirement system for construction of county buildings—aimed immediately, Clark said, at providing $150,000 for courthouse improvements.

PERMIT members of the Fairfax Board of Supervisors to collect 6 cents per mile for travel to and from board meetings.

PERMIT the county to collect fines for convictions in Fairfax on disorderly conduct charges. Such funds now go to the State, Clark said, and would provide the county with $5000 to $10,000 a year if the bill is enacted into law.

PERMIT the Board of Supervisors to establish a five-man board of assessors with three full-time members to be paid $12 a day while actually employed.

RAISE the license tax on dance halls in Fairfax from not more than $100 to not more than $600.

PERMIT collection of revenue license fees from any persons putting up bond, the amount to be established by local ordinance.

State Senator Charles R. Fenwick of Arlington, dropped three bills into the hopper. They would:

AUTHORIZE construction of two swimming pools in Arlington to cost no more than $500,000. Fenwick said one would be for white persons, and the other for Negroes.

REQUIRE preparation of a county welfare budget by the August 15 before the State budget is drawn up to be submitted to the State Department of Welfare and Institutions for inclusion in its figures.

GIVE the taxpayer as much time—three years—to collect overpayment of taxes as the State now has to collect any balance due on tax bills.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.). The two senators from near-by Washington in the Virginia General Assembly were assigned to a total of nine standing committees in the State Senate today.

Adopting recommendations of the steering committee established by a Democratic caucus, the Senate appointed both Senator Andrew W. Clarke, of Alexandria and Fairfax County, and Senator Charles R. Fenwick, of Arlington, to the courts of justice committee.

Clarke was made a member of the finance, insurance and banking, public institutions and education, and privileges and elections committees. Fenwick was assigned to the roads and internal navigation, welfare and the counties, cities and towns committee.

Committee chairmen appointed by the Senate include Robert O. Norris, Lively, finance; Major M. Hilliard, Portsmouth, roads and internal navigation; Lloyd M. Robinette, Jonesville, courts of justice; Morton G. Goode, Dinwiddie, insurance and banking; Dr. James D. Hagood, Clover, welfare; Dr. Walter C. Caudill, Pearisburg, public institutions and education; Mosby G. Perrow, Lynchburg, counties, cities and towns; Robert C. Vaden, Gretna, privileges and elections; I. Paul Wailes, Amherst, fish and game; H. Carter Stuart, Elk Garden, general laws; Charles T. Moses, Appomattox, agriculture, mining and manufacturing; Frank S. Richeson, Richmond, federal relations; Thomas H. Blanton, Bowling Green, nominations and confirmations; Benjamin T. Gunter, Jr., Interstate cooperation; A. E. S. Stephens, Isle of Wight, enrolled bills; Edward L. Breeden, Jr., Norfolk, executive expenditures; Lloyd C. Bird, Chesterfield, printing, and Macon M. Long, St. Paul, library.

Montgomery Council to Get Birthday Cake

Although its first birthday actually is Wednesday, the Montgomery County Council will be given a party, complete with cake and solitary candle, at its weekly meeting today.

Presentation of the birthday cake will be made by a delegation from the League of Women Voters of Montgomery County, headed by Mrs. James V. Bennett, league president.

'We just felt that it would be a nice thing to do," Mrs. Bennett said yesterday. "The league has been working for the past 10 years toward improving the county government and we believe that the present council-manager system provides the most efficient local government."

The League of Women Voters was one of the first organizations to promote the charter movement which was culminated in the election of the County Council January 6, 1949. The members were sworn in and assumed their duties last January 18.

Clifford to Enter Law Partnership In Capital Feb. 1

Clark M. Clifford will move his office from the White House to 1523 L st. nw., on February 1.

Clifford, who is resigning as Special Counsel to the President after four years of service at the White House, has formed a law partnersip with Edward H. Miller. The firm will be known as Clifford and Miller.

Miller, like Clifford, started his legal career in St. Louis. Here in Washington he served for several years in the antitrust division of the Department of Justice, and argued some notable cases before the Supreme Court of the United States. After leaving the Government service, he joined the law firm headed by former Attorney General Homer Cummings.

Opposition Ends

Judge Bazile Reelection Is Assured

Richmond, Va., Jan. 16 (AP).—In the face of a strong indorsement from members of the bar in the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit, opposition to the reelection of Judge Leon M. Bazile of Hanover folded up today.

Members of the General Assembly from the area Judge Bazile's circuit embraces threshed the matter out at a meeting in the hotel room of State Senator Benjamin T. Pitts. Pitts and Delegate William J. Gibson of Fredericksburg were reported planning to introduce opposition to Bazile.

After the meeting, however, Pitts said:

"I have carefully considered this matter and due to the petition of the bar association and other interested persons I shall support the Honorable Leon M. Bazile for reelection as judge of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit."

Gibson said he would have something to say later on the subject.

Delegate Edmund T. DeJarnette of Hanover said five members of the interested eight were present at the meeting. Four of the five were for Bazile and the three absent members had said they would support him, DeJarnette said.

The City Council of Fredericksburg had indorsed Bazile.

Presbytery Approves of Church Union

The Presbytery of Philadelphia of the United Presbyterian Church, which includes three Greater Washington churches, yesterday approved of a proposed union with the Reformed Church of America.

The vote, taken at a meeting of the presbytery at Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, 712 Randolph st. nw., was 26 in favor of the union, four opposed and two not voting. With the action, the presbytery became the sixth of the 51 presbyteries of the denomination to approve the union.

Two thirds of the presbyteries of the church and two thirds of the commissioners to the denomination's general assembly must give approval before final steps to complete the union can be taken.

The general assembly will meet June 14 at Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio.

Three fourths of the classes (comparable to the presbyteries) of the Reformed Church, sometimes called the Dutch Reformed Church, and three fourths of the representatives in its general synod also must give their approval to the merger. There are no churches of the denomination in greater Washington.

The United Presbyterian Church has 207,309 members in the United States. The Reformed Church is about the same size.

Included in the Presbytery of Philadelphia are 31 churches in the District, Maryland, Delaware and part of Pennsylvania. Greater Washington churches of the denomination are Wallace Memorial, River Road, 45th and Fessenden sts. and River rd. nw., and Atonement, in Silver Spring.

Virginia Gets Record Budget

eral aid, institutional revenues, Alcoholic Beverage Control Board operations—$597,493,053 for the two years beginning next July 1.

But only about $303,400,000 of the money would come from State taxes.

The recommendations of Tuck and his budget-makers would also:

Provide for a school teacher pay increase equivalent to $150 yearly per teacher.

Salaries Raised

Increase retirement benefits for State employes and teachers, and make other liberalizations in the retirement plan.

Raise salaries of top judicial and executive jobs from $1000 to $3500 a year.

Increase the general fund appropriations for operating expenses by $23,300,000 over the 1948-50 period, with the principal gains going to public education, mental hospitals and public health. Smaller increases are included for welfare, penal administration, conservation and other State functions.

Provide for a new general fund capital outlay program of $6,140,995 in new unconditional appropriations plus reappropriations of unspent balances which may be as much as 50 million dollars by June 30. The budget also sets up about $35,500,000 in conditional capital outlay, but this money won't be spent unless it materializes in surpluses that are far beyond present expectations.

Revenues Increased

Tuck noted in figuring general fund revenues, that the anticipated yield would be about nine million dollars or 5 percent higher than this biennium's. He saw indications, however, that "the business income curve will continue to flatten out" from the postwar boom that has swelled State finances.

Tuck proposed as one of the steps to improve tax collections a $600,000 increase in appropriations to the State Tax Department which would be spent to dig out delinquent income taxpayers.

The budget allotted $162,678,457 from the general fund for recurring expenditures to operate the government, $45,000,000 as the "generous provision" for school building grants, $6,149,995 for unconditional capital outlays, $2,486,962 to pay for authorized deficits from the old biennium.

To Continue Grants

The school building grants—separate and new—would go to the localities on the basis of $15,000,000 by March 1, another $15,000,000 by July 1 and the third $15,000,000 by July 1 of next year.

It is the announced intention of Battle to continue the annual $15,000,000 yearly grants to the localities through the four years of his administration.

In addition to the $45,000,000 in grants for school building and localities would receive $43,322,000 for secondary roads and city streets; $5,633,410 for public health and $21,940,000 for public welfare.

Added to these sums the localities will get about $20,500,000 from ABC profits; another million from the tax on wines and liquors; $775,000 from capitation taxes.

ACCOMMODATIONS

During January and February, choicest accommodations are available... and at minimum rates. The varied social life of splendid hotels ... the informality of guest houses... or living in the delightful atmosphere of a private home. Take your choice certain that you will find every facility for comfort and enjoyable living.

SHOPPING

Bermuda's shops display the finest British and European merchandise...china, leather goods, woolens, sweaters, tweeds, flannels, perfumes. And now because of devaluation they cost 30% less. For example, an article quoted at 10/6 (ten shillings, six pence) before devaluation cost the American visitor $2.10. Today, an item quoted at 10/6 costs only $1.47.

GETTING ABOUT

See the lovely 17th century town of St. George, climb to the top of Gibbs Hill Lighthouse, visit the Government Aquarium, view the magnificent displays of semi-tropical flowers. And the devaluated Bermuda pound lets you do more. Taxi fare, formerly paid at the rate of $.20 to the shilling, now costs only $.14 to the shilling. And prices for food and everything else are similarly reduced.

BERMUDA is the fun spot for everyone. There's world-famous game fishing. Golf on renowned courses. Fast en-touscas tennis courts. You can watch International golf and tennis matches... see, perhaps for your first time, soccer and rugby being played... or just loaf your vacation away in easy-going, tranquil, lovely Bermuda.

Civil Rights Group Sees House Victory

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

The National Emergency Civil Rights Mobilization said last night that its delegates have been pledged enough congressional support to assure passage of a Fair Employment Practices bill in the House.

The organization also said it is sure of a "simple majority" for FEPC in the Senate, but officials doubted whether they could muster the 64 votes necessary to close a threatened filibuster on the issue.

Delegates, meeting here to obtain backing for the President's entire civil rights program, contacted 175 Representatives and about 50 Senators yesterday.

A meeting with President Truman has been scheduled for noon today.

410 Delegates Barred

Meanwhile, Willard Townsend, chairman of the credentials committee, disclosed that 410 delegates were denied recognition Sunday and yesterday through a rigid "screening" process. Many of those refused were from New York, he said.

A group from New York which was refused entrance broke away from the recognized New York delegation and held its own caucus in the Library of Congress yesterday.

The registered New Yorkers identified the others as members of the Manhattan-Brooklyn branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and charged many of them with Communist leanings and affiliations.

4000 Delegates Listed

By last night more than 4000 delegates, representing 33 States and the District, were registered. By States the major delegations were from Maryland, New York and Pennsylvania. By organizations they were from the NAACP, the American Jewish Congress, the CIO and the AFL.

State delegations said they obtained unequivocal support from Senators Herbert Lehman, a Democrat, and Irving Ives, a Republican of New York. But Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) promised only that he would vote for cloture against an FAPC filibuster.

Ives, Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) and Representative William L. Dawson (D., Ill.) spoke to the mobilization last night at the Interdepartmental Auditorium, Constitution ave. at 13th st. nw.

But while an optimistic Ives called for "bipartisan, nonpartisan" action on FEPC, a pessimistic Senate Majority Leader Lucas put an accusing finger on Republicans in the upper house.

Lucas said he would move to bring the FEPC bill to the Senate in a few weeks.

"I will seek a showdown on this bill," he promised. [Earlier in the day, he told the Illinois delegation the test on FEPC and civil rights would come in the Senate "some time before March 1"]

"It will be a very hard fight," he declared, "and there are many obstacles in the legisltaive path. But theer is hope for civil rights legislation because the majority of the American people want it . . . because the pltaforms of both major parties pledge the enactment of such laws.

"If we do not achieve our objectives this year, we will carry the case for civil rights to the people again in the 1950 campaign. We will strike for the election of legislators who will respond to the will of the people," Lucas said.

FEPC should come before any other item on the civil rights program, he added.

Ives, who championed New York State's FEPC legislation, called for other States to follow suit since "the more of these laws you can get in the States, the better it will be for us when we get a Federal law.

"We can never allow this to become an issue in partisan politics," he said.

Ives also warned that an FEPC law without teeth will be valueless, but he stressed that conferences and mediation are more valuable than "imposing a lot of penalties on people."

Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.) told a delegation that while he favored the principle of an FEPC, he would not vote for the present bill because, according to a delegate, it is "too revolutionary."

Democratic Senator Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland said he opposes "Jim Crowism," and added that he hoped his vote "will be favorable to your views."

Jeers and groans accompanied the statement of Senator Edward Martin (R., Pa.) when he told Pennsylvania representatives he would withhold support of FEPC pending further study.

On behalf of himself and Senator Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.), Representative Herman Eberharter (D., Pa.) promised support.

Iowa's Republican Senator Bourke Hickenlooper was quoted at an afternoon meeting in the Interdepartmental Auditorium as opposing FEPC on the basis the bill would mean prosecution of violators. Democrat Senator Guy Gillette of Iowa said he would vote for it, as did Senator Clyde R. Hoey (D., N. C.).

In the House Representative Joseph W. Martin jr., minority leader, told a Massachusetts delegation he would vote for "some" FEPC measure, but would not be committed on the present bill.

Support came in afternoon speeches from Representatives Jacob Javits (R., N. Y.) and Adam Clayton Powell jr. (D., N. Y.).

The mobilization is composed of representatives from nearly 60 labor, welfare, veteran and professional groups. Its activities today call for contacting Congressmen in the morning and a 2 p. m. adjournment session at the Interdepartmental Auditorium.

Cornerstone Laid at Howard For Completion of Dormitory

The Washington Post

Miss Elliott helps lay cornerstone—Dr. McGrath looks on

Howard University yesterday laid the cornerstone for two units, costing $1,790,000, which will complete a dormitory quadrangle for women begun 20 years ago.

Earl James McGrath, United States Commissioner of Education, Federal Security Agency, was the chief speaker at the ceremony.

Mordecai W. Johnson, president of the 82-year-old university; Miss Susie A. Elliott, dean of women; Miss Gladys F. Walker, representing the women dormitory residents, and Dr. William Stuart Nelson, dean of the university, also were among the participants.

The two new dormitory units, in Georgian style architecture, to be completed in 1951, will house 237 women. Together with the three older buildings, the quadrangle will have a total capacity of 540 residents.

McGrath, speaking from a bunting-draped platform on the wind-swept hillside at Fourth st. and College pl. nw., said, "Educators are beginning again to recognize the important place which experiences outside the formal exercises of the classrooms play in the total education of the individual.

"This view finds expression in the interest which we find in the physical properties of colleges and universities."

He added that, "there is an urgent demand for higher education. It is apparent, too, that this is not a temporary phenomenon."

Asserting that the increased demand for education was not peculiar to the United States, or solely due to "young men whose education was held up by war service." Mr. McGrath attributed it to a realization that "in this troubled and complicated world only those who through education are freed from the tyranny of ignorance, prejudice, and fear can live a personally satisfying and socially useful life."

Printers Told Craft to Have Long Future

Dr. Luther H. Evans, Librarian of Congress, assured some 300 private and Government printers and printing craftsmen yesterday that letter press printing is not on its way out.

He told them, however, that both printers and union leaders must be open-minded on the displacement of printing for some purposes by new devices. Resistance to offset work in some areas, for example, is a losing fight, he said.

Dr. Evans was the main speaker at a luncheon highlighting International Printing Week and sponsored by the Graphic Arts Association at the Mayflower Hotel.

Predicting a "long future" for the printing crafts, Dr. Evans said such devices as multigraphing, mimeographing, offset, microfilm and photography are hardly suitable for much of the reading material used in everyday life.

In complimenting the Public Printer and the Government Printing Office for some "magnificent printing work," which showed the GPO is "not so stodgy" as some people think, the Library of Congress head made a dig at some of the Congressmen.

"We're very much interested in readability," he declared, "and we gave a shout of joy when the Congressional Record was changed from two to three columns."

Turning to another field, Dr. Evans said "we haven't an adequate history of printing in this country," and urged the printers to interest themselves in boosting such a work.

George A. Simonds, who recently retired after more than 30 years in the printing and binding business, was made an honorary life member of the Graphic Arts Association at the luncheon by Walter F. McArdle, association president, who presided.

Events of Printing Week, which is held annually around January 17, birthday of Benjamin Franklin, will include a program at the GPO at 4:35 p. m. today. Philip L. Cole, deputy Public Printer, will speak. Civil and professional associations will sponsor programs and talks on printing during the week.

Takoma Park Votes Tax on Corporations

The City Council of Takoma Park, Md., last night agreed to impose an annual tax on all corporations within the city limits for the first time in the city's history.

Council members pointed out that under Maryland law the city has been empowered to impose the tax but has not chosen to do so. Members agreed that the tax shall be retroactive only to 1949 instead of to the legal limit of four years.

Revenue from the nex tax source is expected to be about $5000 a year and will be imposed at the city's regular tax rate of $1.13 per $100 assessed evaluation.

Councilman J. W. Nies, chairman of the council's finance committee, who introduced the measure, said the development was in line with the council's search to raise new revenue for the city.

The council awarded a $1300 contract to the Link Radio Corp. for installation of a police radio transmitter and a $2525.72 contract to the Inter-County Construction Corp. as the lowest bidder for a storm drainage project in the 1000 block of Carroll ave. near Sligo Creek.

Mr. Acheson's Scalp

China interventionists in Congress, responding to Communist outrages in Peking, are now yelling their heads off for Secretary Acheson's scalp. They demand that he do something of an interventionist nature, or get out. In turning his back on any such action, Mr. Acheson has certainly violated a principle of diplomacy—which is to seem to be doing something when you are actually doing nothing and when there is nothing to do. There are such actions, for example, as sprinkling rose water on a hurricane. They betray activity, even if idle activity. As a matter of fact, however, there can be action in the nonaction that Mr. Acheson outlines as alternative policy. The Chinese pursued a very successful foreign policy for millenia with nothing but nonaction. Wu-wei, they called it. Exactly what wu-wei consists of is a problem for the Chinese to answer. The major ingredient seems to be guile—expressed in solid and silent do-nothingness, noncooperation, passing the buck, playing both ends against the middle, sicking somebody onto somebody else, China-firstism, and things like that. Wu-wei kept country and civilization in China intact for 40 centuries.

So Secretary Acheson has taken up Chinese wu-wei in policy toward China. He is trying, if not to sick the Chinese onto the Russians, at least to disillusion the Chinese about Russia. There is a good chance that the Chinese will get disillusioned, though when they do, we must expect them to try to sick Americans onto the Russians, as the Chinese Nationalists are now doing. After all, the Chinese are the real authors of wu-wei, and they play it with the finesse and statesmanship which the fire-eating sinogogues in Congress simply will not recognize as elements of diplomacy. Would that the hotheads in Congress realized that nonaction can be a policy! After all, Mazzini borrowed the principle from the Chinese, overturned a whole area and became the father of a new country, all with what his biographer calls "masterly inactivity." We hope Mr. Acheson will keep his hair on even though his scalp be threatened.

Margarine Vote

The Wiley-Gillette amendment offered as a substitute for the House bill repealing Federal excise taxes on margarine, on which the Senate votes today, is also a repeal measure; but, unlike the House bill, it proposes to ban interstate commerce in yellow margarine. If the Senate approves this bill, it will be a triumph for the dairy interests that are behind it. We agree with Senator Fulbright who has led the fight for repeal of the discriminatory excise taxes that it would be preferable to leave the existing legislation in effect rather than outlaw shipments of colored margarine. For the substitute amendment, instead of removing obstacles to free competition between butter and margarine, would impose new competitive handicaps on the margarine industry by further restricting the area within which yellow margarine could be sold.

Spokesmen for the dairy interests actually have the effrontery to argue that this wrecking substitute amendment would protect the rights of the States by allowing them to decide whether or not yellow margarine shall be sold within their borders. As a matter of fact, it would deprive 15 of the 32 States permitting sales of the colored product of access to sources of supply, since they have no margarine plants of their own. Of course plants might be constructed in these 15 States. However, as Senator Fulbright points out, quite a number of them do not have sufficiently large populations to provide adequate market outlets justifying investments in new plants.

Another phony argument in favor of the proposed interstate ban on shipments of yellow margarine is that it would give added protection against fraudulent substitution of colored margarine for butter (a danger, by the way, greatly exaggerated by the dairy interests). On the contrary, if interstate trade in yellow margarine were prohibited safeguards against deceit and fraud would be less effective, because yellow margarine would no longer be subject to the protective provisions of the Federal Pure Food Act. Under the House bill, on the other hand, which the dairy interests insist would encourage fraudulent practices, yellow margarine would still be subject to the stringent protective provisions of Federal regulatory law. Evidently Senators who claim that the Wiley-Gillette amendment would give added and necessary protection against so-called "butter-legging" are either ignorant or disingenuous—willing to play on fears and emotions, and base their case on arguments that they themselves do not believe in.

If the substitute amendment should pass, we hope that the House will refuse to accept Senate modifications that would defeat the basic purpose of its own bill: namely, to free the margarine industry from legislative restrictions that protect the dairy industry from the competition of a cheaper and equally nutritious product. It would be a shabby legislative trick to repeal taxes that obstruct fair competition only to replace them with discriminatory prohibitions of an equally or even more oppressive nature.

Confusing The Public

J. Edgar Hoover's statement on wire tapping by the FBI deserves examination. "In recent weeks," he said on Sunday, "there has been an increased circulation of inaccurate information and half-truths on wire tapping. Statements have been made which are so untrue and legally unsound that I am forced to conclude that they were motivated for the purpose of confusing the public . . ."

This assertion is astounding, coming as it does from a man whose agents have lately been caught in a bare-faced attempt to deceive a United States Court about their wire-tapping activities. During the Washington trial of Judith Coplon for violation of the Espionage Act, her attorney tried to question FBI agents about wire tapping but was silenced by Judge Albert Reeves after the Government attorney denounced the questions as "nonsense" and a "fishing expedition." In New York, Judge Sylvester Ryan has been conducting a pretrial hearing to determine if the Government's case against Miss Coplon and Valentin Gubitchev was based on information obtained by wire tapping—it having been disclosed that 30 FBI agents monitored the wires leading to the home of Miss Coplon's parents and 10 agents monitored the wires leading to the home of Mr. Gubitchev.

Judge Ryan has characterized the denials by FBI agents that they had any knowledge of wire tapping in connection with the Washington trial as evasions. He will have to find some stronger term to characterize FBI conduct in connection with the case before his own court. For an FBI memorandum has now been discovered recommending destruction of all wire-tap records in view of the imminency of her (Miss Coplon's) trial. Previously an FBI agent had testified under oath that the wire-tap records had been destroyed as a matter of routine. The destruction of these records, itself a violation of law, makes it very difficult, of course, for the defense to prove that the Government's case rested on wire-tap information. Could it have been this performance that Mr. Hoover had in mind when he spoke of "an increased circulation of inaccurate information and half-truths on wire tapping?"

And what statements, we wonder, does Mr. Hoover have in mind that are "so untrue and legally unsound" that he is forced to conclude "they were motivated for the purpose of confusing the public?" Mr. Hoover's own statement asserts that "the FBI has less than 170 telephone taps in existence, confined to internal security cases, throughout the entire United States and its possessions." The tapping of 170 telephones can involve the private conversations of a great many individuals who do not in the least imperil internal security. Moreover the Communications Act does not authorize the tapping of 170 telephones; it does not authorize the tapping of any telephones by anyone for any reason whatsoever.

The Department of Justice has asked Congress to amend the Communications Act in order to permit tapping of telephones in kidnaping and security cases under authorization of the Attorney General. Congress has not granted the request. Unless and until it does, wire tapping cannot legally be used as an aid to law enforcement. We consider it imperative at this time for Congress to inquire searchingly into the extent to which the law has been violated and the courts of the United States hoodwinked by a Federal agency. And we think the law should be made so clear that even Attorneys General can understand it.

Housing Co-ops

Two chief questions arise as to the cooperative housing program that President Truman has sent to Congress. The first is whether the Government should interest itself in cooperative housing. There is, of course, a great deal of sympathy with the general purpose of the undertaking, which is to aid "families of moderate income" to provide themselves with good housing at rents or purchase prices they can afford to pay. The President noted in his budget message that private industry built a million new dwelling units last year, more than ever before. Most of these homes still cost more than families with modest incomes can pay. But the higher-income group is being pretty well taken care of. Last year Congress also launched a new program under which local communities are being helped to finance low-rental public housing and to reclaim their slum areas. There is a strong argument now for giving special attention to the middle-income families, especially those which have been pushed into the slums.

The Administration's latest proposal is definitely related to relief of the pressure on low-rental housing in that it would give preference in the controlled cooperative projects to families displaced by slum clearance. Various preferences would also be given to veterans and their families. Considering the extent to which the Government is already committed in aiding slum dwellers and veterans in the solution of their housing problems, its interest in encouraging the cooperative movement as a means of limiting or minimizing these obligations is a natural outgrowth of current facts.

The real question is the nature of the aid to be given the housing co-ops. We opposed the proposal before Congress last year for direct Government loans to housing co-ops because of the subsidy that would have been involved. The Administration itself was cool to direct loans. The plan it now advances would retain the idea of giving technical assistance to co-ops in planning their projects and would permit a preliminary advance of funds to finance such planning. But co-ops and other nonprofit housing organizations seeking long-time loans not available from private sources would have to go to a national mortgage corporation for housing cooperatives. That corporation would be initially financed by the Treasury, but borrowers would have to subscribe to its stock equal to 7½ percent of their loans, so that it would ultimately be owned by the borrowers themselves. The debentures to be issued by the corporation would be guaranteed by the Treasury, but the corporation would maintain a reserve to absorb normal losses. In theory, the corporation would operate without cost to the taxpayer.

If the Government is to foster housing co-ops at this time, Congress ought to make certain that it will pay its own way in fact as well as in theory. Federal expenses for worthy causes have piled up at a shocking rate. With a deficit of more than five billion dollars in sight for the next fiscal year, it is beyond the pale of reason to ask for additional housing subsidies. We are glad to note that Senator Douglas and others are insisting at the hearings on probing into the commitments the bill would entail.

"Hap" Arnold

No one who reviews the history of military air power can avoid the conclusion that this history and the life of Gen. Henry H. Arnold are almost synonymous. Though not an old man at the time of his death Sunday, "Hap" Arnold was a personal link between the feeble beginnings of the air arm and the thunderous present. As a young Army second lieutenant he learned flying from the Wright brothers themselves, and he piloted a Signal Corps biplane at a time when flying was thought to be the exclusive province of daredevils and lunatics. The same conviction that led him to see the potentialities of military aviation in 1911 brought him to the direction of America's air arm during history's greatest war, when thousand-bomber fleets were a daily order of business.

In retrospect General Arnold's greatest accomplishment undoubtedly was the building of air might for World War II after he took over the Army Air Corps in 1938. His motto of "do it yesterday" became legendary. The Air Force was many men, but its direction was in no small part the product of Arnold's flavorful and impatient personality. Though his title during the war was chief of the Army Air Forces, in reality he ran a separate operation, and Congress recognized his position by granting him five-star rank. His battle for equal status for the Air Force was rewarded in the Unification Act of 1947.

Along with Winston Churchill, "Hap" Arnold bears primary responsibility for strategic bombing as developed during World War II. He never shied away from criticism, but air power was almost a religion to him, and like many single-minded devotees he sometimes lacked perspective. Occasionally, as in the exaggerated claims of bombing results, he oversold strategic bombing. While the implications of his doctrine must be left to history to judge, no one can doubt "Hap" Arnold's tremendous contributions to air strength. Even after his long overdue retirement because of poor health, like an old fire horse he could never keep away from his first love. He served the country with honor and distinction, and he will be widely mourned.

"Price Tag" Committee

Almost the first question that Congressmen are likely to ask about legislation coming before them this year is, "How much will it cost?" With a prospective deficit of more than five billion dollars in President Truman's budget, the trimming of expenditures has become a task of the greatest importance. Consequently, there is real need for a "price tag" committee to analyze the probable cost of bills that Congress will be asked to enact. The only difficulty with the "Price Tag" Committee that Representative Martin, the minority leader, has set up is that it is partisan, whereas a committee providing this sort of information to Congress ought to be wholly impartial.

The unfortunate fact is that many bills are introduced without any realistic consideration of their cost to taxpayers. That practice was excusable in wartime, but it must be abandoned now if the Nation is to remain solvent. In some instances, as in the case of the Brannan plan, it is literally impossible to determine with any degree of accuracy what the cost of a legislative proposal may be. But in such cases the maximum and minimum probable commitments ought to be realistically faced, and if no reasonable estimates can be ascertained that fact itself becomes a powerful argument against the project. The best opportunity the Republican "Price Tag" Committee will have to make an impression on Congress seems to lie in making fair and reasonable cost estimates on each minority as well as majority bill. The least the committee can do will be to force the Administration to come forth with cost estimates of its own on legislation Congress is asked to pass.

Butter vs. Oleo

Charles W. Holman of the National Milk Producers Federation, in his January 10 letter, proposes only "equal treatment for oleo and butter." Will the federation agree to a law prohibiting the movement in interstate commerce of butter as well as oleo to which any artificial coloring has been added?

One of the engaging casuistries of the dairy lobby is the fiction that butter comes to us straight from the healthy green fields and sanitary barns of deserving farmers. Butter, like just about everything else but lettuce, has become a mechanized industrial product. Farmers sell their milk whole to corporations or combines just as soulless and monopolistic as those which make oleo. The butter corporations turn out a mechanical product flavored and colored to suit the market demand—and they do a bit of price juggling and fixing as between butter, milk, ice cream and cheese besides.

Surely deserving farmers originally got some money for milk. But equally deserving farmers also get money for the ingredients which go into the equally industrialized product called oleo.

BYSTANDER.

Arlington.

I have read with genuine admiration the letter from Mr. Holman, writen on behalf of the butter makers. He presents his case with great vigor and ability.

I knew Mr. Holman well during his youth and early manhood, and I then recognized his outstanding intellectual gifts. Therefore, when I read his letter against the proposal to remove the handicaps under which consumers may obtain oleomargarine, admittedly much cheaper and as good as butter, I could not help ruminating upon the early life of this able gentleman and picturing in my mind what a wonderful argument he could set forth on behalf of the farmers who produce ingredients of oleomargarine and of consumers who are unable to or do not choose to pay the high prices demanded for butter during the past several years.

Symphony Attendance

While it is understandable that The Washington Post hould go all out in support of our National Symphony Orchestra it is unfortunate that the attendance figures mentioned in the editorial, "Music For Everyone," January 11, are rather inaccurate and, therefore, extremely misleading.

It is apparent that the person who wrote the editorial has not been attending the concerts regularly for, if he had, he would have doubted the statement that, for the Wednesday concerts, "the average subscription attendance . . . (is) 3206." Unless, of course, this figure represents the total for both series "A" and "B." If this latter is true, then the average subscription attendance would indicate a decrease from last season.

Since Constitution Hall seats 3844, if the figure 3206 were accurate, then—considering that there have been but two actual "sell outs" (the concert on opening night and the one conducted by Beecham)—the average subscription attendance for the other Wednesday concerts would exceed 3000. Any regular concert-goer knows this cannot be true.

To put it another way, let us assume that 3206 is the correct figure. Let us also assume that there has been no "papering" of the house—no free tickets distributed. It would seem reasonable to assume that the sale of tickets for individual concerts would boost the attendance to at least 3500. Any observant subscriber knows this cannot be so.

Concerning the figures for the Sunday concerts, it must be realized that only two concerts had been performed at the time the editorial was written—one of which was the sold-out appearance of Margaret Truman. So there is nothing at all "remarkable" about these figures.

We should do all we can to help the National Symphony. But bloated subscription figures will tend to frighten away potential buyers of tickets for individual concerts. This will reflect on the deficit.

Dog Quarantine

The unusually large number of recent dog-bite cases leads me to protest vigorously against lifting the dog-quarantine restrictions now in force in Montgomery County.

In the last two months I have given nine children each a series of 21 daily rabies inoculations as a result of rabid dog bites.

Untended dogs, some undoubtedly abandoned, are seen day and night in the Four Corners area, in which nearly all of these cases occurred. At night I have seen dog packs, numbering as many as 10, running wild everywhere in this part of Silver Spring, even now while quarantine is imposed but obviously not enforced.

Transit Uproar

Perchance has local transportation become too big a job for Capital Transit? Admittedly, the higher fares have reduced patronage. Admittedly, the newly requested increase will further reduce the number of riders. What kind of approach is that for an organization responsible for providing transportation in a still-growing metropolis? The company speaks of 7½ percent dividends but appears to have lost sight of the ecoromics that permits Ford, A. & P., and DuPont to earn that kind of money.

Just what eliminating weekly passes would do downtown business is worth considering. It seems reasonable to assume: (1) Many customers are optional (pass-riding) shoppers who would use neighborhood facilities rather than pay extra round-trip fares; (2) many optional riders merely use otherwise vacant space on regularly scheduled vehicles; (3) erstwhile pass holders would ride less. For merchants, some of this business would be deferred, some lost. For CTC, the stay-at-homes represent squandered potential.

Whether CTC is a victim of circumstances (or mismanagement) is a moot question. Its economic approach seems old fashioned, its public relations bad, and its current plight almost hopeless. The low fare paid by school children suggest that an increase or subsidy is in order, but even its strongest arguments will fall upon unsympathetic ears so long as the public is kept in a perpetual uproar—fare increases, wages, transfers, dividends, hearings, service cuts, radios, captured audiences, no hearings, another increase, blood, turnips. That stuff gets old. It'll sells cars faster than John L. can peddle oil burners.

"CED Budget Plan"

After reading with interest your head-lined article of January 8, "Plan to Reduce Taxes, Cut Budget 6.7 Billion Given by Businessman," I waited as usual for a succeeding issue of The Washington Post to analyze and clarify editorially what had been reported as news. Your January 9, editorial, "CED Budget Plan," was hardly an analysis or clarification but was rather an uncritical repetition of the original article and a tacit concurrence.

When stripped of its trimmings and irrelevancies this plan bears little resemblance to its 6.7 billion-dollar headline. What planner ever envisioned that 2.8 billion dollars for GI insurance refunds would be included in the budget for 1951?

Another dream, which even CED refuses to venture will materialize, is the 1.3 billion dollar "saving" through unemployment reductions. As you reiterate, "if unemployment is above 2.5 million," one million below present unemployment, "actual budget receipts may diverge widely from the estimated returns and deficits may result." It is suggested, rather unbusiness-like, that, despite such deficits during years of near-record national income (the fiscal year of 1950, for example,) "the surpluses of years of maximum employment are expected to cancel out the deficits of bad years."

Rendered of these two fanciful items, GI insurance premium refunds and unemployment compensation reductions which together total 4.1 billion dollars, the balance of 2.6 billion dollars seems rather less impressive. To bring about this modest saving such revolutionary and noncontroversial proposals as a reduction in Marshall Plan aid, an increase in postal rates, an increase in the interest rates on veterans' loans, less spending for national defense, and greater efficiency in administration of other Federal activities, are offered.

If the proposed 650-million-dollar reduction in purchases of veterans' mortgages is just that, it is hardly an expense, according to better-business standards, but rather a loan, repayable whether held by banks or by the Government. Nevertheless, the proposed increase in interest rates would consitute a worthy contribution to the indigent and benevolent banking interests by those beneficiaries of wars—veterans.

The smallest item of proposed savings, savings through more efficient administration of "other" Federal activities, falls within an area wherein leaders of business might well make some worthwhile proposals. A mere .2 to .4 billion dollars hardly does justice to so notable an assemblage as labored and brought forth this mouse.

It is doubtful that these hard-headed business men were met together to thus dream wildly and rehash stale obscurities such as these. Perhaps the real business at hand was the "two more tax changes" which would result in a savings of 2.25 billion dollars—to businessmen.

A rereading of the original article brought out one minor point that I missed the first time. Listed in the middle of the last paragraph as a member of the CED special subcommittee that produced the report was "Philip L. Graham, president and publisher, The Washington Post."

Independent Republicans

By Marquis Childs

Morse, Tobey Fights

THE REPUBLICAN Party is engaged in a kind of spiritual wrestling match in search of its soul. This pursuit of a policy that will carry the party to that long delayed victory can be a salutary exercise.

It should unlimber muscles long unused and stir brain cells that have not been disturbed for many a moon. So much of our political life, both Republican and Democratic, coasts along on tired cliches out of the past.

But the Republicans who are trying to frame a policy statement should not forget the old adage that actions speak louder than words. This applies with particular force to certain of the primary contests in the party this spring and, above all, to two contests where the fate of Republican Senators with an independent voting record is at stake.

One is Charles Tobey of New Hampshire. On the other side of the continent is Wayne Morse of Oregon. While they may be unduly apprehensive, both men are fearful that old guard Republicanism is out to knock them off.

The case of Tobey is particularly interesting. He is being opposed in the Republican primary by J. Wesley Powell, who up until a short time ago was administrative assistant in Washington to New Hampshire's other Senator, Styles Bridges. Powell is a 34-year-old disabled Air Force veteran who served Bridges before the war and after his return.

BRIDGES declares that he is staying strictly neutral in this contest, although it is hard to see how this is possible since Powell is in a sense his protege. Furthermore, the relationship between the two Senators has been distinctly cool and they have more often than not been on the opposite side of major issues.

But the chief concern of Tobey's backers is over the possibility that the State will be flooded with money from wealthy interests outside New Hampshire. On several occasions by his forthright demand for investigation of deals engineered by insiders in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Tobey has offended powerful railroad interests. His independent voting record has offended some of the moguls in his own party.

Morse has likewise asserted his independence by voting more often with the Democrats than the Republicans. He was, for example, one of 15 Senators who voted for the confirmation of Leland Olds to be a member of the Federal Power Commission. Such votes, together with Morse's forthrightness in speaking his mind on controversial issues, has antagonized private utility managers and lumbermen in his State.

Thus far no rival candidate has announced for the contest. The final filing date is March 10. But the report here is that Vice Adm. Thomas L. Gatch is being readied to run against Morse, with emphasis on his wartime role in the Pacific.

MORSE'S case is more complicated than that of Tobey. In Oregon, a new labor-liberal element is breathing life into the moribund Democratic Party in the hope that before too long it will offer the Republicans some real competition in what has been almost a one-party State.

This labor-liberal element is suspicious of Morse, charging him with reverting to old-line Republicanism in election years. That is the attitude expressed by Richard L. Neuberger of Oregon in The Nation. Neuberger, Democratic State senator, questions Morse's stand in opposition to the Columbia Valley Authority.

The fate of an independent Republican could hardly be better illustrated. If he deviates from the old guard line, he draws the fire of the jealous bosses of his own party. If he fails to meet every liberal-labor test, he becomes suspect on that side of the fence.

Men such as Morse, Tobey and Senator George Aiken of Vermont are in one of the oldest and most vigorous of Republican traditions. It is the tradition of Norris of Nebraska, LaFollette of Wisconsin and Borah of Idaho. No party line determined the views of those independents.

If the Republican Party is to be purged of their inheritors, it will be poorer even than it is today. Not all the policy statements in the world will make up for such a loss.

Defense Of Formosa

I am a great admirer of your editorial columns and usually in accord with the opinions expressed therein, but I must register emphatic disagreement with the stand you have taken on the Formosan question. As Senator Taft so ably expressed it, involvement in war if we help Chiang to keep Formosa out of Communist hands is a neglgible possibility.

General MacArthur, whose knowledge of the Eastern situation is unquestioned, strongly advises the retention of Formosa to complete American defenses in the Far East. To allow this island, which is of such tremendous strategic importance, to fall to the Communists while we stand idly by, would be incredible folly, especially when a very simple display of force on our part would avert the calamity.

A pusillanimous fear of being involved in the affairs of Communist China is not the proper foundation for a sound foreign policy, and does not add to the stature of this Nation as the foremost opponent of Communist expansion.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Must General Bradley Testify?

A WEEK from this coming Thursday, on January 26, the Secretary of Defense, Mr. Johnson, and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Bradley, are to appear before the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate. They are to be interrogated about the foreign policy of the United States. It is an understatement to say that this is a remarkable way to run a railroad—to invite a Cabinet officer to testify publicly whether he agrees with the President, to invite a general, who is the President's military adviser, to say whether he agrees with his Commander in Chief.

Lippmann

According to Senator Knowland, who initiated it, the reason for summoning the Cabinet officer and the general is that the Congress has been "denied information to which it is entitled and upon which it could base (its) judgments." According to Senator Taft "the strategic importance of Formosa . . . is a vital factor in the determination of the Formosan policy; and obviously the Joint Chiefs of Staff must be listened to." Both Senators say that they cannot "reach sound judgments" without the testimony of the Chiefs of Staff which has been "denied" to them. This would be easier to believe if both Senators had not already reached and had not loudly delivered their judgments—on the very question on which they say Congress lacks the information to reach sound judgments.

IT WAS, however, Senator Vandenberg who seems to have clinched the demand for the summons. Unlike Messrs. Knowland and Taft he has not prejudged the issue which he wishes to investigate.

Nevertheless, speaking with great respect for Senator Vandenberg, is the statement he made in the Senate last Wednesday well considered? "And so far as I am concerned," he said, "I cannot feel that I have obtained adequate information in respect to the facts, without the testimony of the defense establishment in general, and of the Secretary and of the Chiefs of Staff in particular."

Is it really true that Senator Vandenberg cannot find out what the Chiefs of Staff think on this or any other question except by summoning them to give public testimony, while the whole world listens?

AS A matter of fact Senator Vandenberg can always and at any time get information he needs simply by having a quiet talk with General Bradley or with anyone else in the Pentagon whose opinion he values. Moreover, he will probably not get all the information he needs and ought to have by staging a public hearing. For what the Chiefs of Staff can tell Senator Vandenberg confidentially about the strategic needs and plans of the United States, and what they can afford to tell the whole world, including the Soviet and the Chinese Politburos, are not necessarily or probably the same.

SENATOR VANDENBERG is absurdly modest when he depicts himself as so unimportant, so bereft of influence, that he has not been able to find out what the Chiefs of Staff think about Formosa.

Has he ever asked them and been told it is none of his business? If that is what has happened, it is indeed a scandal that cannot be remedied except by summoning the Chiefs of Staff to give public testimony. But unless Senator Vandenberg has in fact been "denied" the information he needs, the exhibition which is being arranged for January 26 will be a gross and unnecessary violation of the spirit and the usages of the Constitution. If it is allowed to pass unchallenged and to become a precedent, it will inflict a grave injury both on the fundamental principle of civilian supremacy and on the integrity of the military establishment.

FOR WHAT the Senate is proposing to do is to summon a military commander to testify about a decision taken by his duly elected and lawful civilian superior. Where does that leave the President and the Chiefs of Staff? It puts them on notice that whenever the Chiefs of Staff are called in to advise the President, which is continually in the field of foreign affairs, they may expect to be summoned later to give a public accounting of the advice they gave the President. Therefore the President cannot count on receiving, and the Chiefs of Staff cannot afford to give, advice—except the kind of advice which can be published to the world and can withstand cross-examination by the Senators. Advice of that kind is not likely to be the best advice.

Government cannot be conducted that way—by invading and destroying the confidential relationship between the President and his Cabinet, between the President and his military advisers. Their advice to the President, like a lawyer's advice to his client, cannot be made a subject of public debate. To do that is to impair the integrity and the discipline of the military establishment and the constitutional authority and responsibility of the President.

THE MATTER is important and no one should be allowed to confuse the issue. There is no question that responsible Senators like Vandenberg and Taft have a right to be fully informed. There is no evidence that they have been denied the information they want.

But if they still lack all the information they feel they need, then the question is how they are to be informed. Can they be informed, as they have always been before, by informal and confidential discussion? Or must they have public testimony and a public cross-examination? I should think that Senator Vandenberg, who is not on a political binge, would prefer to make up his mind by knowing all about the subject privately rather than a little about it publicly.

For he must realize that in a public hearing of this kind, the witness, if he deals fully with the subject, will have to make disclosures which are against the public interest; and if the witness does not deal fully with the subject, then his testimony will certainly be inadequate and probably misleading.

Veterans As A Special Interest

AS THE Veterans' Administration begins the mailing of nearly three billion dollars in insurance dividends, President Truman reveals that more veterans than ever will be enrolled under the GI Bill of Rights next year in schools below the college level.

The President himself raises the question "whether this program still conforms to the original sound objective of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act—to enable veterans to resume education or training interrupted by the war . . ."

This year we are spending nearly seven billion dollars, one sixth of all expenditures, on veterans' benefits and services. This does not include the insurance dividends; nor does it count the veterans' bonuses now voted by 18 States. Yet after national defense it is the single largest item in the budget.

How long does "readjustment" go on? Are pensions and bonuses next on the agenda?

Two out of every five men over 20 are veterans of some war. Add another conflict, and the majority will be veterans. Someday we shall have to reconsider most seriously that bright political line dividing the veteran from the citizen.

VETERANS have long been considered a group apart. In one sense they are.

Common justice demands special care and allowances for disabled veterans. By the same token, returning soldiers need help in readjusting to civilian life.

By July, 1951, eight million veterans of World War 11 will have received education and training at a cost of nearly 13 billion dollars. Two and a half million will have obtained 13 billion dollars in guaranteed loans. Nine million will have drawn unemployment and self-employment allowances of nearly four billion dollars.

These sums have meant a lot to veterans of World War II, who are younger than our labor force as a whole, and are averaging less income. A study showed that two years ago payments to these veterans averaged 20 percent of their total income.

These payments were undoubtedly inflationary. We taxed individual and corporate incomes to provide the money, which means that there was some money taken from the higher income brackets and paid out to the lower.

But the program, whatever its shortcomings, was more than justified. By training millions of young men to higher knowledge and skills, it enriched our country. In any case, it was a debt we owed to our returning servicemen.

NO ONE could quarrel with this purpose. It is the future that gives us pause.

The curtain was briefly lifted in the last session of Congress when Mississippi's John Rankin introduced his general pension measure. Nervous House members did a series of flip-flops on the bill, fearful of going on record against the veterans. When it had been amended past the point of logic, the bill was sent back to committee.

But the drive has barely started. Today we have high employment, and veterans are still getting readjustment benefits. What if we should enter a period of economic difficulty?

It would be very hard to stop a Treasury raid if many veterans were unemployed. Veterans are a sacrosanct special interest, less because of their patriotism than their voting strength. War veterans, with their families, today make up two fifths of the population.

Through no fault of its own, the Veterans' Administration has become a symbol of that special interest. It is a burgeoning bureau with the most diverse functions: loan guarantees, education, medical service, hospital administration, pensions, insurance.

Functionally, this is absurd. There is no logical connection between a home mortgage and a hospital, except that the man availing himself of both has a veteran's label pinned on him.

The Hoover commission recommend that these functions be put where they belong—veterans' housing guarantees in the Housing and Home Finance Agency; veterans' hospitals with other Government hospitals, under a single agency; veterans' insurance in a Government corporation. These suggestions make good sense, and they would relieve the VA of the political pressure that has long been its bane.

The time has come to face the fact that veterans are also citizens. In the long run, this is the only view that makes sense.

Even if we fight no more wars—a pleasant, but not a likely, assumption—two thirds of the men over 65 will some day be veterans. When that day comes, can we go on pretending that their problems are not the problems of all of us?

68,000 Coal Diggers Are Idle In 6-State Union 'Rebellion'

soon will be expanded to 100 members.

Most of the 69,000 soft-coal miners who struck a week ago in a seven-State unexplained stoppage, brushed aside Lewis' suggestion that they return. Some mines open last week now are closed.

Mines owned by four steel companies and by the giant Pittsburgh Consolidated Coal Co., world's largest commercial producer, remain the principal targets in Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Virginia, Kentucky and Alabama.

Several hundred diggers in Utah who refused to work last week went back to their jobs. All other States report normal operations.

Locals Act Independently

In some cases, locals refused to abide by group decisions to return to work as Lewis' telegrams suggested.

The only clews were in comments from miners.

One of them, President Paul Terreta of UMW local at the Isabella mine of Weirton Steel Co., decided the men "are disgusted with the present situation and want a five-day week."

Lewis ordered the Nation's 400,000 soft coal diggers to work only Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays after the industry-wide contract expired last June 30. That schedule has been interrupted several times by strikes.

Two weeks ago, 16,000 Illinois miners stayed away from the pits in the first of the present series of strikes.

In Washington, Battle declared: "It looks like the first revolt against Lewis.

"There's been no complaint from the men to their employers about their hours or wages or working conditions. They have told the operators 'we want to work.'"

Other operators thought Lewis wanted to make it look like a revolt.

Here's the State-by-State picture of the latest strike:

Pennsylvania—45,000 of the western section's 56,000 miners are out. The hard core of resistance to Lewis' suggestion is in the Greene and Fayette County areas. In Pittsburgh, the Duquesne Light Co. said rationing of electricity will become necessary unless the firm's mines reopen in a few days.

West Virginia—At least 6750 of 110,000 miners are staying away from the pits. Idleness is centered in the northern fields, with southern West Virginia reporting almost full-scale production. UMW locals previously had voted to work this week in northern operations. But pickets halted production at some mines that attempted to resume production.

Kentucky—Ten eastern Kentucky mines are closed near Lynch, 2000 miners are idle at the United States Coal & Coke Co., a United States Steel Corp. subsidiary.

Operators estimate 5000 miners are idle, the same number that refused to work last week.

Alabama—About 5000 miners are out. Among the silent mines are those owned by United States Steel and two owned by Republic Steel. A few small mines, closed last week, now are open.

Virginia—Production in southwest Virginia was virtually normal. Only about 340 of that area's 15,000 miners chose not to work. Two mines were closed at Tom's Creek and Harman.

Ohio—About 5500 miners found themselves "unwilling to work." Of 13 large deep shaft operations, eight were closed. L. A. Dunning, secretary of the Mahoning Coal Council, said Youngstown dealers have only two days of coal in event of a frigid spell.

Taylor Declares Pope 'A Most Marvelous Man'

Tells How to Secure A Mastery of English Quickly

An interesting new booklet offered free to men and women who want to secure a real mastery of the English language tells of a "foolproof" method for studying English usage without attending classes. The plan, as described in this little book, has been worked out by Grenville Kleiser, who has helped thousands of students to a better command of English.

According to the publishers, this world authority uses no involved rules of grammar or rhetoric, but presents a simple, straightforward, inspiring method that secures real results in very short time. Thousands of users of this method, they say, have gained increased power to express themselves in fluent, convincing, clear-cut English and so have improved their possibilities of social and business advantages.

To acquaint more men and women with the advantages of improving their understanding of English, the publishers, Funk and Wagnalls Company, have printed full details of this speedy, pleasant method in a booklet which they will send to anyone who requests it. The address is Funk and Wagnalls Company, Dept. WP-115, 153 East 24th Street, New York 10, New York. A penny postcard will do. There is no charge for the booklet. —Adv.

One on the Aisle—

A 'Good' Socialist With Fatal Fault

By Richard L. Coe

THERE CAN BE no doubt that the rise of British socialism has been one of the motivating forces of the world today. This is the background for a searching study of a good but ineffectual man, eloquently acted by Michael Redgrave at the Dupont in "Fame Is the Spur."

The picture, a fine one, is adapted from a novel by Howard Spring, whose inspiration, it's generally agreed, was Ramsay MacDonald, England's first socialist prime minister. Though completed some years ago, it arrives here opportunely, with Britain's general election six weeks away.

Hamar Radshaw (in the novel the name was Shawcross, but England now has a cabinet member of that name) is a poor boy who's heard from his grandfather how the lowly were cut down at Peterloo and who keeps before him, all his life, the sword that grandfather wrested from a landed lord. He determines to study hard, to work himself into the position where he can improve the lot of the poor.

And this he does, by night-long studies, by menial work and forming himself into a man of strength and courage. Vibrant and handsome, he has the qualities of leadership.

But one fault he does have — the inability to look at himself as he is. Instead he sees himself as he would be, the fearless leader he's sought to make himself. It is a kind of vanity, a self-righteousness.

This leads him into compromises that finally lose him his parliamentary seat. It also leads him into blindly opposing his understanding wife's militant feminism.

Expertly Acted

With failure then, first in his private life and ultimately in his public career, Hamar drifts into his old age, ostensibly honored but a failure. And as he tries to draw his grandfather's sword from the scabbard he has symbolically placed around it, you realize the sum of his tragedy.

Redgrave plays the role with sincere integrity, a memorable achievement. It is another facet of political biography from that of Willie Stark in "All the King's Men," and the fatal flaw is less sensational. But the character weakness is as clear and as finally tragic.

Rosamund John is expert as the wife who understands only too fully her husband's self-righteousness. It is not her fault, but the cutting of the picture, that brings up the feminist angle too abruptly for conviction. Her dying advice to Redgrave is moving in the extreme.

There are other well played roles in this detailed, painstaking film. And, apart from being a moving study of man's strivings, "Fame Is the Spur" will give those interested in the outcome of Britain's parliamentary election next month much food for thought.

"FAME IS THE SPUR." GFD release of Two Cities-F. Del Giudice production. Screen play by Nigel Balchin from Howard Spring's novel. Music by John Woodridge. Photographed by Gunther Krampf. H. Warman and S. Pavey. Directed by Roy Boulting. At the Dupont.

Postlude

Schonberg And Scriabin Works Heard

By Paul Hume

Two composers, known for systems of composing they propounded, were discussed last night at Phillips Gallery.

There La Salle Spier talked about and played music by Alexander Scriabin and Arnold Schonberg. The two men were born within two years of each other. But Scriabin, born in 1872, died 35 years ago. Schonberg, born in 1874, is still teaching in southern California.

Of the two, Schonberg has become widely known as the greater innovator. Scriabin thought he was opening great new vistas. Actually his work was swallowed up in appreciation of his superiors, Debussy and Wagner. His star waned before it ever attained real brightness.

His orchestral phantasmagorias, the Poem of Fire, Divine Poem and Poem of Ecstacy, are occasionally revived by great orchestral colorists such as Stokowski, Monteaux, and Kousevitsky. Frederick Stock also won great success with them.

But even Horowitz several seasons ago could not make the tremendous problems of the sonata, Vers la Flamme, seem more than much labor bringing forth highly colored mice. Spier last night played the fifth sonata and two short pieces.

Arnold Schonberg is today still unknown to most musicians. Comment about him does not explain his music to any but a very few initiated. His piano pieces are difficult for the listener. His piano concerto, which was not mentioned last night, is a great work, almost entirely neglected.

Spier played excerpts from the piano writings dating from 1911 through 1925.

Mrs. Lewis Uses Post Ad and Finds Big Demand for Apartments

N.W. SECTION—2 rms. and private bath, util. furn., conv. transp.

This is the two-line Post want ad that Mrs. Lewis of 1220 Euclid St. N.W. used, with immediate success. By 9:30 a. m. on the first day the ad appeared in The Washington Post, the apartment was rented.

Mrs. Lewis and her aunt, Mrs. Calvin Giles of the same address, are enthusiastic about Post want ads. "We always have good results with The Post," they say.

The first person to answer Mrs. Lewis' ad got the apartment but 17 other Post readers called later in the day and were disappointed to learn that the apartment was no longer available.

Do you hve an apartment, room or house for the 17 people Mrs. Lewis had to turn away? Reach them with a Post want ad. You'll find that it's easy to place a Post want ad. If there's a phone listed in your name, you can call in your ad and charge it. Call NAtional 4200 today and let a trained ad writer prepare your ad for you.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

GOLDIE AHEARN, nicely subsidized by the television receipts, is back in the business of promoting fights at Uline Arena and is offering a heavyweight match Friday night between Elkins Brothers and one Bill Weinberg. Brothers is easily identified as the busy fellow often seen in Washington rings, but Weinberg is a comparative stranger.

"He's from Chelsea, Mass.," explained Ahearn. And then he denied a non-existent charge. "Weinberg is not the greatest fighter in the world," he said, modestly.

POVICH

"I'm all through lying about my fighters," added Ahearn. "This television makes liars out of liars so it don't do no good to give false pretenses. But this Weinberg is a good fighter—the last of the Mohicans."

The last of the what?

"The last of the Mohicans—the last of the good Jewish heavyweights like Max Baer and Battling Levinsky and the rest. They've gone out of the fight business, all except Weinberg."

There was no recollection that Weinberg had ever been mentioned among the top contenders for the heavyweight title, or even among the bottom ones. "That," said Ahearn, "makes no difference. Heavyweight contenders are made overnight."

HE SAID, "Look at Lee Savold. He knocks out an Italian named Gina Buonvino and now they want to match him with Ezra Charles. If Weinberg beats Brothers, he's made overnight."

He's giving Weinberg $1000 for his end on Friday night, and Brothers is fighting for a percentage of the gate receipts. "And when Weinberg gets in there with Brothers, he'll have to fight or jump over the ropes, because Brothers keeps everybody busy."

He's going to tell them both they're on the spot in his Friday night show, said Ahearn. "Since television, I have a new spiel for all my main-bout fighters. I warn 'em that if they look lousy on television, they're dead all over the country and no promoter will want to use 'em.

"Television is making the whole fight game honest. It's like a third dimension. On television, a fighter can look bad, sound bad and also stink, and it's the best thing that has happened to the fight business to get rid of the phonies."

OUT OF HIS MATCH will emerge at least one title contender, probably Brothers, Ahearn predicted. "They're all side-stepping Brothers, anyway," he said. "He made Pat Comiskey quit the fight business last summer, and he murdered Arturo Godoy but lost the decision.

"Ezra Charles and Lee Oma don't want no parts of Brothers. I been trying to match him with Oma, and Tex Sullivan, his manager, don't answer the phone if he knows I'm on the line. Brothers is no fancy dan, just a hungry fighter.

"They're all scared of him, and no wonder. I'd be scared myself if I wake up some night and find Brothers in a dark alley with me. Sure, he's had some losing fights, but these days a heavyweight is just as good as his last fight. If it's a nice win, he's a sensation like Savold."

Anyway, said Ahearn, he's giving the customers a couple of pros who will give them action. "They like money, so they're fighting for it, and if they win they know there's more where it came from. Show me the fighter who don't like money and I'll show you a dope."

RIGHT NOW, Ahearn avers, there's an offer of a $35,000 guarantee to Charles if he will risk his title against Brothers in Washington next summer. "I didn't put it up, Brothers' managers did," explained Ahearn, "and they're willing to gamble that they will wind up with Charles' title even if they get nothing else out of the fight."

Charles' managers have let it be known that they want no immediate traffic with Brothers, a solid-hitting 195-pounder who likes to mix. They have suggested that he get in there first with such as Oma, Savold or Jimmy Bivins, a polite way of advising Ahearn's man to go out and get a rep.

"Meanyhile, who is Charles fighting?" complained Ahearn. "I see by the papers that he'll fight at San Francisco on February 22 against a fellow named Bob Murphy, or perhaps Joe Bashara. Who are they? As far as I'm concerned just a couple of guys named Joe. Or Bob. What's the difference?"

Presentation Tonight

Al Blozis Memorial Comes From Heart and Kids at G. U.

Georgetown has been wanting for some time to give a trophy honoring its greatest athlete, Al Blozis. But the Hoyas wanted it to come from the kids, the students at Georgetown . . . it has.

Almost five years after Blozis was killed in action (Vosges Mountains, France . . . February 2, 1945) the Al Blozis memorial trophy, a sterling silver bowl 11 inches high, will be awarded by GU President Rev. Hunter Guthrie S.J. at a dinner tonight in the Ryan dining hall at the college.

The award goes to a man as yet unselected who typifies "Georgetown's top student athlete." He may be a member of any team and any class although it seems probable the winner will be a senior.

Oustanding candidates include football players Connie O'Doherty, Tommy Hardiman, Vic Banonis and Jack Kivus, track star Billy Mitchell and Basketballer Dick Faivey.

The trophy is the idea of the senior class and junior class President John "Jake" Dunne, Garden City, N. Y., who is not an athlete but who is a great admirer of Blozis. Dunne organized a committee which also includes Henry Lee from Richmond, Va., and Ed Finneran, from New York, nonathletes, too.

With the school's permission the boys took up a collection for the trophy, got $200 in less than two days and purchased the silver bowl which will remain in Georgetown's permanent possession (each year's winner will receive a small replica).

The boys picked a trophy without any ornamentation, wanting to keep it, in the words of Class President Dunne, "strong and forceful looking, yet simple in a great sort of way; the way the class thinks Al was."

Blozis was GU's top athlete of modern times. He broke 38 track records, was all-pro tackle with New York Giants. He was also one of the Hilltop's best students, maintaining a B-plus average for four years while majoring in chemistry.

Tournament Here Again

The All-American Amateur Baseball Association yesterday accepted the invitation of the Washington Junior Chamber of Commerce to play the annual unlimited tournament here September 12-17.

The tournament was held here last year and the Heurich Brewers won the AABA championship.

The week-long tournament opens in Griffith Stadium for the first night and finishes its last three days in the Stadium. Other games are played on the Ellipse.

The tourney will be sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, with the profits going to the Junior Chamber of Commerce's Youth Welfare Program.

The boys tournament will again be played in Johnstown, Pa. during the latter part of August.

The Association elected officers yesterday in New York and named Arthur Bellone of Brooklyn to the presidency.

Others officers named: First Vice President, Fred D. Crosby of Baltimore, Md.; First divisional Vice President, Albert A. Foy of Concord, N. H.; second divisional Vice President, Zane Snyder of Johnstown, Pa.; secretary, V. Nash Carmichael of Besssemer, Alabama; and treasurer, George Cooper of Johnstown, Pa.

$333,000 Match Race for Citation?

Montevideo, Jan. 16 (AP).—The co-owner of Penny Post, 4-year-old Argentine racing sensation, said today he would invite Citation to meet his speedster in a $333,000 match race this year.

The duel would be staged at the Palermo track in Buenos Aires over a distance of two miles and three sixteenths. Each horse would carry top weight of 132 pounds.

Willie Pep KO's Riley in 5th Round, Retains Title

St. Louis, Jan. 16 (AP).—Willie Pep retained his featherweight boxing title with a fifth-round knockout over Charley Riley, St. Louis challenger, before 11,000 fight fans tonight.

The end came suddenly after one minute and five seconds of the fifth round of what was to have been a 15-round bout. A hard right uppercut to the jaw sent Riley down, after the fighters had dueled on fairly even terms for four rounds.

Pep, who comes from Hartford, Conn., never came close to danger. Pep danced around almost playfully until near the end of the fourth.

Pep weighed 123½ and Riley 125½. Riley, who has been clamoring for several years for a crack at the featherweight crown, played a game of caution until the lightning hit him, and he never had a chance.

Climax Comes Quickly

Pep danced around him all the way, and now and then waded in with a flurry of rights and lefts that backed the baffled Riley to the ropes.

The climax came so quickly there was some disagreement in the babble of ringside observers as to precisely how the kill was made.

But there was solid agreement on one thing—it took Riley no time at all to hit the canvas, and he stayed there long after the count of ten, thoroughly out.

The referee, Harry Kessler of St. Louis, said a sharp left under the heart preceded the right to the chin that made the knockout. Others maintained it was a right to the body and a right to the chin.

Riley's best weapon was a good right, but it was a weapon he could seldom use, for Pep had the speed and the cunning to stay out of its way.

So, it wound up as a contest between Charlie's power and Willie's speed and skill. And at the climax the lithe, graceful Pep called up power and power to spare behind the flashing blows that cut the challenger down.

One judge scored the first round even, and the referee scored the third round even. All the rest were Peps' in the opinion of both judges and the referee.

Long after the fight the bookkeepers were still busy counting money, but it was announced that the gate was more than $55,000, a record for St. Louis. Pep's share was 50 percent of the receipts minus taxes, and Riley got 10 percent.

Cooper Scores Decision Over Lino Garcia

Jimmy Cooper decisioned Lino Garcia of Havana in the feature 10-rounder at Turner's Arena last night.

Cooper weighed 126 and Garcia, 131. A flurry of rights and lefts in the third round had Garcia down and the Cuban champ complained of a sore jaw for the rest of the fight.

It was reported after the bout that Garcia had a dislocated jaw.

The local featherweight champ was the master throughout but Garcia had too much ring saavy to let Cooper get set long enough to apply the knockout punch.

Cooper scored heavily with his left hand throughout the fight but found Garcia's ability to dodge and weave too much to catch up with.

The preliminaries were highlighted by three knockouts.

Kid Saucer kayoed Battling Moore after 2:39 of the third. Bob Kaiser stopped Jackie Earle, 2:55 of the second; Ralph Brown K. O'd Jimmy O'Brien, 2:59 of the third; Roney Boy Scott decisioned George Corrigan, Benny Droll of Peroia, Ill., scored a five-round semiwindup decision over Johnny Pratt of Washington.

Crosby Tourney Nets $32,000

Monterey, Calif., Jan. 16 (AP).—The Bing Crosby Invitational Golf Tournament, concluded yesterday, netted more than $32,000 for charities. Proceeds will be divided evenly between the Monterey County Community Chest and the Sister Kenny polio fund.

Sponsored by Crosby, the tournament costs the crooning movie star some $25,000 out of his own pocket. Each year he puts up $10,000 for the professionals to shoot at; pays for the trophies for the amateurs and foots many other bills. Last year the event netted $18,000 for charity.

Rain Slated Tomorrow With Hogan-Snead Play-off Scheduled

Los Angeles, Jan. 16 (AP). There's a chance the Ben Hogan-Sam Snead golf playoff—already rained out once—may run afoul bad weather again Wednesday. The Weather Bureau said today "It looks like a fair chance of rain."

Hogan's unparaleled golf comeback, after an auto crash which almost claimed his life, ran into Snead's hot putter in the Los Angeles open last week. Snead birdied the last two holes to tie for first place. The 18-hole playoff was scheduled the next day—then rained out. At stake is top money of $2600. Second prize is $1900.

Just Make Him Study

Really Now, Does Anyone Get Hurt When Boy Receives Small Fee for College Football?

By Whitney Martin

NEW YORK, JAN. 16 (AP).—As just a kibitzer in this cops and robbers game called sanity code, we have been wondering just who gets hurt when a boy gets a small fee, more or less, for playing football for a college.

Does it hurt the school? Does it hurt the boy? Does it undermine the whole structure of higher education?

Frankly, we think that the greatest evil connected with subsidization of student athletes is a possible tendency to subsidize athletes who aren't students.

That is, to pay for the athletic services of boys who have no interest in their studies, but who nevertheless are permitted to remain in school and play football despite the fact they can't make a passing grade in any subject and sometimes never even go to classes.

That is liable to make an athletic bum out of the boy, who gets the idea that everything comes easy in the world and he can get by the rest of his life on his muscles.

That's all wrong, of course: But there is another side to the subsidization argument.

Let's say there is a bright, ambitious boy. His parents are poor but honest, as they say. It has been a struggle for them even to get their son through high school. They couldn't possibly finance a college education for him.

It happens the boy is a fair to middling football player, and a representative of a college, or an alumnus, approaches him and offers him say, $25 a week and tuition and board and fodder, to go to that school and play football.

The boy is a good student, and he wants an education. He'd be slightly less than bright if he didn't take the offer. He attends the school the full four years, gets respectable grades, and is graduated with a good educational background enabling him to earn a better living than he would have been able to earn had he not been exposed to college.

We wouldn't say that subsidization had harmed the boy, not the school, if the subsidization was done openly.

The danger would lie in furtive subsidization, making hypocrites of both boy and school. It isn't conducive to strength of character for a boy to have to deny he is being subsidized when he is.

The big danger in subsidization, though, is that schools in their greedy desire to stride toward the top in the national football picture will overlook scholastic requirements in acquiring their athletes. A boy is a football player, period. That he is not bettering himself by study and will not be much of a credit to the school after he leaves is not considered important.

If all schools would demand that their athletes live up to the scholastic standard required of other students, or get out, we think it would go far toward curbing criticism concerning overemphasis on sports. You just can't criticize a kid for being a good football player if he isn't neglecting his studies.

As indicated in our hypothetical case, subsidization has made it possible for many a worthy boy who otherwise would have no chance to go to college to get an education, and nobody got hurt. But it also has permitted boys to enroll who had no intention of even trying to learn anything.

That hurts the boy, and the school. If no scholastic effort is required of the football player, a school might as well go out and hire the Chicago Bears and be done with it.

'It Stinks'

Old Blue Snorts at De-Emphasis

By Lou Black

NEW HAVEN, CONN., Jan. 16 (AP).—An old blue tonight strongly told Yale's top student leaders their suggestion for de-emphasis of athletics in the Ivy League "stinks."

Clinton R. (Cupie) Black of New York, captain of the 1916 football team, informed Sports Editor Frank Stannard of the Yale Daily News:

"As far as I am concerned this is the most ridiculous thing I have ever heard of."

Head Fotball Coach Herman Hickman spoke in a more reserved tone, but left no doubt he disagreed with the campus big shots who are members of Yale's Torch Society. So did Head Coach Charley Caldwell of Princeton, one of Yale's arch rivals.

Torch, Yale's top honor group, consists of 15 seniors who have distinguished themselves in various fields of academic and extracurricular activities.

In a statement last night, Torch urged Yale, and other Ivy Leaguers including Harvard, Princeton, Cornell, Dartmouth, Pennsylvania, Columbia and Brown "to undertake to stop the tide toward excessive time spent on athletics by voluntarily limiting the role of major sports."

THE society, which includes eight star athletes, five of them footballers, specifically recommended:

"A maximum 12-week season with no supervised team practice allowed except within that season, and a maximum of two hours spent per day in any supervised aspect of a major sport."

Bill Draper, president of the Honor Society, stressed this afternoon that the statement was based on three months of deliberations and "the unanimous opinion that sports are overemphasized."

At the same time Tom Guinzberg, managing editor of the Yale Daily News, made it clear that Torch is only advisory, has no legislative powers and seeks none.

Black, past president of the Yale Football "Y" Association and instrumental in bringing Hickman here, burned as he said:

"Why those students didn't go to some graduates, or alumni groups before they released this to the newspapers I can never understand. I know that the

Catholic Bows, 65-57; Scallion Gets 32 for Washington College

Nick Scallion, a scooting 6-foot sophomore, scored 32 points for Washington College, and Catholic University absorbed a 65-57 licking last night on the C. U. court.

Scallion, 19, hit 14 field goals in 24 attempts, and brought his pregame average to 20 points in the Mason-Dixon Conference.

Scallion kept the team from Chestertown, Md., out ahead except when the score was tied at 17-17 after 10 minutes of play.

At half time Washington led by 37-27.

Late in the contest, Washington was far ahead, 55-37, when Catholic got hot with Joe Della Ratta, 15 points, and Jim Balint, also 15 points, hitting frequently.

The victory gave Washington a 4-1 record in the conference to 2-5 for Catholic.

Only Rich Students, Few Pros Can Afford To Engage in U. S. Sports, Says Soviet Paper

By Tom Whitney

MOSCOW, Jan. 16 (AP).—It is claimed here by a Soviet newspaper that the only people in the United States who can afford to engage in sports are the rich and professionals.

Komsomol Pravda declared that sport in America is not available to the workers and farmers because they have neither money nor time for it.

The paper went on to say that "in America there can engage in sport only the narrow class of rich students and the relatively small number of professionals."

Komsomol Pravda claimed that recently there have been demands that United States youth get into sports. It added that these voices are chiefly from the American military who see in sport a valuable means of military training and militarization.

The paper quoted General Eisenhower, now president of Columbia, as favoring wider development of sport on the grounds that every good soldier during the past war had been connected in one way or another with sports.

It said: "For the newly-appeared claimants to world domination sport is necessary for the preparation of 'good soldiers.'"

It added that military considerations dictate the kinds of sport played in America. It said that "American militarists set their hopes on sport because bourgeois sport kills thought, conscience, humanity."

It said American boxing, for instance, has long since turned into a repulsive sadistic spectacle in which criminals and gangsters engage and in which there are a greater number of fatalities than anywhere else in the world.

It said wrestlers continually are thinking up newer and newer repulsive means of shocking spectators.

It said that American football hockey, auto races, bicycle races, motorcycle races and other sports are organized to assure the maximum number of deaths and maimings. It said this is considered a necessary flavoring in order to please the American public.

Komsomol Pravda wrote: "American sport educates the youth of the U. S. in the spirit of humanity hating and cruelty, implants in it sadism and other beastly instincts and makes uncontrolled 'supermen.' It is just this type of 'good soldier' which the imperialists wish to see."

The paper said that at present all physical education classes have been transformed into schools for the preparation of sport instructors for the Army. It said militarization has penetrated the YMCA and other sport institutions.

It added that ordinary people of America are resisting actively the attempt to militarize sports.

Indians Buy Embree From Browns

Cleveland, Jan. 16 (AP).—Purchase of Pitcher Charles (Red) Embree, 30, from the St. Louis Browns was announced today by the Cleveland Indians.

No sum was announced in the deal for the righthander who won 3 and lost 13 last season. Embree of Monrovia, Calif., worked for the Indians from 1941 through 1947 except for 1944 when he played for Baltimore. In 1947 he was traded to the New York Yankees who traded him before last season to the Browns.

Disguised Liver Good Perch Bait

By Ralph Murdock

IN A RECENT COLUMN we referred to a catch of 64 white perch taken in Eastern Bay on New Year's Day with the use of liver for bait.

MURDOCK

Irving A. Lehman, a local angler, in a letter asks the following questions: "I have noted with interest your quotes of perch fishing in Eastern Bay, and reference to liver for bait. Can you enlarge on this a bit? Is the liver offered raw? And what liver is used? Hog? Beef? Calves? Or perhaps, other fish liver?

Our answer: On the above trip either calf or hogs liver would have done the job equally well. Above all, the liver must be raw and cut in strips to resemble a bloodworm or a part of one when applied to a hook. Relative to fish liver we have never heard of its use as bait, but this we do know, it is grand eating.

Incidentally, the commercial fishermen who frequent this spot use pork rind dipped in mercurochrome for bait. As many as ten hooks on a metal hoop is baited with the tinted rind and lowered to the bottom. We understand that this procedure works exceptionally well at times.

Here is Mr. Lehman's next series of inquiries: "Can you enlarge a bit on whether the perch might take green shrimp; or perhaps corned shrimp (shrimp laid in heavy salt for a few days)?"

IT'S OUR EXPERIENCE that perch will take fresh green (large commercial) shrimp occasionally, but it is doubted that they will bite on salted shrimp at all. We definitely know that green shrimp is not only a top bait for perch but also an excellent one for rockfish. Bloodworm in our opinion, is the best bait for white perch and live minnows for yellow perch can't be topped.

Minnows are available at the South and Severn Rivers and the Patuxent River in the Pig Point area where fair catches of yellow perch are now being taken. A local sporting goods store has ordered some bloodworms. As soon as they are available we shall advise our readers. The worm scarcity is due to the frozen areas from where the worms are shipped. Mild weather could have altered this condition, we hope.

Long Island Ranks Third In AP Poll

By Joe Reichler

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Holy Cross today replaced St. John's of Brooklyn as the Nation's No. 1 college basketball team in the third weekly Associated Press poll.

The Red Hot crusaders of Worcester, Mass., one of the country's three major unbeaten teams, drew 47 of a possible 128 first place ballots cast by sports writers and sports casters from coast to coast, to nose out St. John's 1037 to 992. They ranked fifth in last week's poll.

The Crusaders made it 13 straight triumphs last Saturday night by trouncing Georgetown 77-51. The previous night, Georgetown gave St. John's a terrific scare before the Red Men finally pulled out a squeaky 67-66 victory.

St. John's Has 14-1 Record

The Redmen (14-1), who fell off the top perch for the first time this season, swung 35 first place votes to capture the runner-up spot from Long Island University. (LIU) (12-1) attracted 27 first place nominations to finsh with 871 points and retain their hold on third place.

Bradley of Peoria, Ill., boosted itself two notches into fourth place by picking up a pair of victories over the week to earn three first place and 709 points.

Kentucky, upset by Tennessee Saturday, dropped from second to fifth place with 623 points. The Wildcats wound up with three first place votes to nose out Duquesne by only 13 points.

The top teams (first-place ballots in parenthesis) and records including Saturday night's games with first place are worth 10 points, second place 9 pints and so on down the line:

Old Blue Snorts at De-Emphasis

'It Stinks,' Says 1916 Football Star

graduate members of Torch are very much disturbed about this thing.

"I can't understand why those boys in Torch who played for Herman this fall didn't go to him before they released this thing. As far as I am concerned the whole thing stinks."

FOOTBALLERS on Torch who signed the statement were Vic Frank, star guard; John Setear, veteran end; Dale Liechty, Charley Keller and Bob Raines.

Said Hickman:

"I question whether or not this is the majority opinion of the football team. This is to me a question of university policy. It is none of my business. Whatever the board of athletic control decides on this issue, I will abide by."

Other Yale coaches withheld immediate comment.

At Princeton, N. J., Caldwell said:

"I feel that the recommendations by the Yale Torch Honor Society have little bearing on the present situation at Princeton. We have obtained a proper balance between the physical and academic aspects of university life."

Not Team Opinion, Says Hickman

"Many of our players tell me that they spend less time on athletics than they did in their secondary schools. I sincerely believe that the Ivy groups should take a firm stand against professionalism in college athletics, but the question of time allotment is one to be worked out by the individual institutions."

Sauer Will Go To Wash. State If Asked, He Says

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 16 (AP).—Watchfully waiting George Sauer said today he had not been invited to Washington State College to talk over the head football coaching vacancy there. But he added:

"I'll go if they ask me."

Sauer, who parted company with the Naval Academy last month, spoke with Washington State officials in New York last week. His name has been linked with the job ever since.

George Mikan Comes In for Last Showing

By The Associated Press

Hurry! hurry! hurry! Come see George Mikan, the greatest one-man basketball show on earth.

He runs . . . he jumps . . . he passes . . . he scores. And scores. And scores. And scores.

The price? One ticket to any National Basketball Association game involving the Minneapolis Lakers.

The incomparable Mikan, holder of virtually every scoring mark in basketball history, is running rampant again, blasting, tying and setting records almost every time he takes the floor.

Fresh from his feat of scoring 76 points in two nights against the powerful Rochester Royals, Big George and his Minneapolis Lakers come to town tomorrow night to tackle the Washington Caps in the season's fourth meeting between two clubs. It will be Minneapolis' final appearance of the season here.

And the Caps still are looking for their first victory over the Lakers.

The 6-foot-10 Mikan swished a season's NBA record of 51 points against Rochester Saturday and came back Sunday for 25 points.

The double-barreled bombing left the former De Paul University star with 1075 points in 38 games, and the Minneapolis team 10 percentage points behind leading Rochester in the Central Division race.

On the scoring side for the Caps, Jack Nichols continues to be the big man with a total of 507 points in 36 starts, an average of 14.1 per contest. Fred Scolari is runner-up with an average of 13.1, and Bones McKinney is holding down third place with a 9.5 average.

How the Caps are doing:

Player.	G.	F'ld gls.	F'l gls.	To'l pts.	Av.pts. per g.

Howard Plays Virginia Union

Howard entertains Virginia Union, 27 point conquerors of West Virginia State, defending CIAA champs, tonight at Uline Arena at 8 p. m.

The Howard Bisons have won eight games in eleven starts and hope to take tonight's game to strengthen their bid for the CIAA crown.

The Bisons feature the playmaking ability of Lewis Thompson, coupled with Frank Booth at a forward post and Hillary Thompson at center.

Union is led by two small men, Zeke Clement, 5 foot 7 and Earl Smith, 5 foot 6, both at forward positions.

Georgetown plays Siena College at Albany, N. Y. tonight in an attempt to get back into the win column. The Hoyas have lost their last three to Maryland, St. Johns and Holy Cross.

Ft. Meade Champs Open Defense of Army Ring Titles

Phoenixville, Pa., Jan. 16 (AP).—Three 1949 champions, all from Fort Meade, Md., will defend their titles in the second Army Boxing Tournament opening tomorrow night at the Valley Forge General Hospital.

The defending champions are, Pvt. Sonny Lewis, featherweight; Pvt. Henry Pietrzyk, lightweight, and recruit John Hawthorne, middleweight.

GW Frosh Trim Bullis Prep, 58-27

The George Washington Frosh won their eighth game in nine starts, defeating Bullis Prep, 58-27, yesterday at G. W.

Bob Edenbaum scored 15 points for the Frosh to take the game's scoring honors, while Bullis' Dayton Warfle got 14 to lead the Little Admirals.

A. U. Frosh Beat Eastern

American University Freshmen defeated Eastern High school, 58-50, yesterday at Eastern. Ed Friedlander and Bob Jones were high for the Frosh with 15 and 12 points while Kenny Atchison's 12 paced Eastern.

The Freshmen led all the way, although they were never able to pull very far in front of the Ramblers, their biggest margin being 11 points, late in the third period.

Jury Triples Jail Term in Numbers Case

An Arlington Circuit Court jury decided in 20 minutes yesterday to triple the original 30-day jail term imposed on a restaurant operator convicted of gambling.

Last October 15, Vincent Casimano, 45, ocowner of a lunchroom at 4032 Lee hyw., was arrested in his place of business and charged with operating a lottery.

On November 27, Arlington Police Court Judge Hugh Reid found him guilty and imposed a 30-day jail sentence and a $100 fine. Casimano appealed.

A 5-man Circuit Court jury heard the appeal yesterday and apparently decided Judge Reid had been too lenient. The jury, empowered under Virginia law to set the penalty, upheld the conviction and decided Casimano should serve 90 days in jail and pay a $100 fine.

Casimano was freed in $500 bond by Judge Walter T. McCarthy pending arguments February 3 on a defense motion to have the verdict set aside.

Detective Russell Runyon testified yesterday that Casimano was arrested after an undercover man had visited the lunchroom for 15 days.

Policeman Charles Wood, the undercover man, told the jury he had observed patrons make plays with Casimano and made several himself.

Casimano, described by Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker as a "racketeer," lives in Avondale, Md.

St. John's Wins

St. John's defeated Bladensburg, 44-28, in a junior varsity basketball game on the Bladensburg floor yesterday. Steve Mitchell of the winners scored 15 points.

Crime Report Ready Soon

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said yesterday the subcommittee he heads will be ready in about two weeks to report on the proposed Senate investigation of interstate crime and racketeering.

Kefauver himself introduced the resolution which went to the Judiciary Committee.

Meanwhile, Chairman Robert Crosser (D., Ohio) of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee said he has some doubts as to the constitutionality of the bill to ban interstate shipments of slot machines, introduced last week by Representative Prince H. Preston (D., Ga.). Crosser said the bill will go to a subcommittee but he did not know if, or when, hearings will be ordered.

The Associated Press reported from Denver that Mayor Quigg Newton of that city has named the five delegates who will represent the American Municipal Association at Attorney General McGrath's February crime conference here. The conference will consider interstate racketeering and what to do about it.

Newton, as the A. M. A. president, named these delegates: himself, Mayor A. E. Covo of Detroit, Mayor Joseph Darsh of St. Louis, Mayor deLesseps Morrison of New Orleans and Mayor Fletcher Bowron of Los Angeles.

Morrison and Bowron have been outspoken against out-of-State gambling interests who have invaded their cities. Bowron last week called for a Federal anti-racketeering and other national laws to meet the threat of the modern day tygoons.

Witnesses Refuse Answers

regularly. Darling refused to answer more than 10 questions about what Hitz called "your being a numbers writer."

Bernard "Bill" King, mechanic, 16 Anacostia rd. se. Miss Franklin also testified that King was a gambling associate of Acalotti. King admitted knowing Acalotti but refused to answer any questions about his connection with the defendant.

Mrs. Lucy Jones, cab dispatcher, 520 E st. ne. Miss Franklin testified that Mrs. Jones was another person from whom Acalotti regularly picked up numbers play, amounting to from $10 to $20 a day. Mrs. Jones refused to answer seven questions.

Miguel Gonzales, barber shop proprietor, 1916½ 14th st., nw. Hitz branded Gonzales as "a professional numbers writer," but the later denied the allegation and refused to answer seven other questions. At one time, after claiming his constitutional privilege against self-incrimination many times, Gonzales admitted to Judge Alexander Holtdoff that he did not know the meaning of the word "incrimination." Later he denied one question "on the grounds that I have committed a crime." Judge Holtzoff threatened to clear the courtroom when the spectators laughed loudly.

Miss Franklin, who left the stand late Friday in tears after a raking cross-examination, was the day's first witness. She was on the stand less than 10 minutes.

David H. Coates, a photographer, identified one exterior and seven interior pictures he said he had taken of the 4310 46th ave. bungalow.

Protest to ABC Cites Noise

The 'teen-agers who frequent the Rail Bar & Restaurant at 511 2d st. ne., ride away in the early hours on motorcycles, turn the area into a raucous rodeo, and make so much noise a sober citizen can't even hear the soothing noise of trains in nearby Union Station.

So 47 citizens claimed in a petition yesterday protesting the tavern's application for renewal of its Class C license.

Ralph D. Camp, attorney for the establishment, replied the management did its utmost to run an orderly place.

The Alcoholic Beverage Board took under advisement this and two other cases:

Jacob Miller's application for renewal of a Class B license for a grocery at 501 A st. ne., protested by a member of the Metropolitan Baptish Church, 5th and A sts. ne.

Pickwick Liquor Store's application for transfer of its license from 1003 Connecticut ave. nw. to 1529 17th st. nw. Two assistant superintendents of the istrict Recreation Department, Sibyl Baker and Robert W. Andrew, objected that the Recreation Department plans to build the Mary Force Stead Memorial Playground on P st., between 16th and 17th sts. nw.

Death Penalty Asked For Alleged Rapist

U. S. Aides' Case

Seek Appeals In Channels, Veterans Told

The Court of Appeals yesterday ruled that Government employes must exhaust administrative procedures within their agencies before appealing to the court.

The decision reversed a District Court ruling which held that two Navy Department workers were illegally demoted during a reduction in force.

Two Philadelphia Navy Yard workers, Jepson L. Nelson and Charles W. Reeves, both veterans, first appealed their demotion to the Civil Service Commission. Apparently their appeals to the commission were pending when they brought these suits." Judges Henry W. Edgerton, Wilbur K. Miller, and David Bazelon said in their unanimous decision, "and the Commission withheld decision in view of the suits."

"We think the District Court erred in granting summary judgment to appellees," the court ruled.

"The fact that administrative action is probably erroneous does not create an exception to the rule that administrative processes must be exhausted before judicial relief is sought."

The Government yesterday urged the death penalty for Hugh G. Mincey, 33, for the rape of a 4-year-old girl last September.

Judge T. Alan Goldsborough announced that the case would go to the District Court jury today.

"The court is of the opinion that the jury should approach the consideration of this case when they are not tired," said the judge in dismissing them for the night.

In his concluding argument, Assistant United States Attorney Cecil R. Heflin reminded the jury that Beverly MacDonald, the little girl who was found brutally torn in her abdomen, shortly after the alleged rape, feared Mincey so much that she would not remain in the courtroom.

Only One Way, He Says

Then Heflin said:

"There is only one way to break up crimes of this sort in the District of Columbia. Use the power that Congress has given you and add to your verdict the death penalty. This is not a case where a girl in her teens gave herself willingly. This lititle child was taken by force. She wouldn't submit to that punishment."

Mincey's attorney contended he might have been guilty of "some other crime" but not of rape. They said that he was a family man with four children of his own whose only prior criminal offense was an attempted burglary. Also, they charged that he was not afforded a lawyer when he told police that he had beaten the little girl for cursing him but did not rape her.

Would Be Travesty

Defense Attorney Harry Ahern declared:

"This man is guilty of some crime. To permit him to go free would be a travesty of justice. But he is not guilty of rape."

So badly was the little girl torn, said Ahern, that it was improbable that it was a sexual act. He said the death penalty would be unjust.

"The only probable thing that did it was this man's hand when he beat her. I think he must have been insane when he did it. I don't know," admitted Ahern.

Mincey, a balding ironworker, was on the witness stand for an hour.

In a soft voice with a Southern accent, he told the jury that he was in a lavatory at the rooming house, 518 H st. nw., where he and the alleged victim both resided when she came in and cursed him. He testified:

"I hit her about eight times on the bottom . . . The child didn't even cry when I spanked her . . . If I was asked one time, I was asked a thousand time did I rape that child. I told the police no . . . I never did have no intention of raping the child . . . I didn't spank her no harder than I spank my own children."

Five Indicted On Narcotic Counts Here

Five persons, charged with violating narcotics laws, and a man accused of second-degree murder, were among those indicted yesterday by the District grand jury.

Also indicted was a 42-year-old laborer on a charge of taking indecent liberties with his two daughters.

He is Michael Angelo Comas of 1117 24th st. nw. According to the charge, he took immoral liberties with his 10 and 12-year-old daughters on January 3.

In other indictments charging immoral advances to small children the following were listed as indicted: Charles A. Rainey, 71, of 1107 Penn st. ne.; Gilbert S. Eaton, 32, of 425 D st. se., and Lum Lai, 51, of 620 5th st. nw.

Indicted for allegedly carnally knowing a 12-year-old girl on a golf course here was Bernard Arrington, 18, of 626 Kenilworth ave. northeast.

Robert Murray, jr., 30, of 1726 Willard st. nw., was accused in an indictment of the second-degree murder of Bernard D. Boling, 26, of 1761 Willard st. nw. Boling was stabbed in the right temple after an argument over money.

Arthur L. Clark, a 53-year-old porter, was charged with promoting a numbers lottery in and around the Mayflower Hotel lobby between November 29 and December 6, 1949. A police undercover man said that Clark sold him numbers chances on three occasions.

Those indicted for allegedly violating narcotics laws were listed as :

Charles F. (Blowtop Charlie) Alexander, 31, of 874 Yuma st. se.; Herbert D. Waters, jr., of 1100 8th st. nw.; Juanita A. Varn, 37, of 921 G pl. nw.; Lewis A. DePaepe of 1424 Oak st. nw., and Charles C. (Buck) Marshall, of 1708 10th st. nw.

The grand jury ignored a charge of illegal possession and transfer of cocaine which had been lodged by police against Jesse W. Jeffers, jr., of the Dunbar Hotel.

School Bus Falls in River

Heflin, Ala., Jan. 16 (U.P.).—A school bus loaded with 22 children dropped 25 feet into the Tallapoosa River today when a bridge collapsed. Several children were injured but none seriously.

Kearney Ordered To Pay Wife $125 Every Two Weeks

Judge Jennings Bailey of District Court yesterday ordered Michael M. Kearney, 36, a lawyer, to pay $125 every two weeks for the support of his wife, Wandajune Kearney, 33, and their two sons.

The court also ordered Kearney to pay $1500 to his wife's lawyer, Herman Tocker, for legal services. Kearney, who resides at 1900 F st. nw., must turn over the two boys, nine and six years of age, to Mrs. Kearney, of 1445 Ogden st. nw., by Monday, January 23.

Kearney filed suit for a divorce from Mrs. Kearney, but was denied it by Judge Bailey, who then gave the boys to the mother. She charged that Kearney was cruel to her and refused to support her and the boys.

Brown of the American Council on Education and Dr. Walter G. Daniel of Howard University. Herman Edelsburg of the Anti-Defamation League will be moderator.

Jury Indicts District Man In Still Raid

A Washington man was indicted yesterday by a Fairfax County Circuit Court grand jury on charges stemming from the raid of a still on December 28 near McLean.

He was David L. Mills, 34, 1242 10th st. nw., on a charge he feloniously manufactured whisky at the still, which police termed "one of the largest ever raided in Fairfax County." He pleaded not guilty.

Also indicted yesterday as the January term of court got under way was Lawrence V. Turner, 19, Merrified, Va., on a count of forging and uttering a $124 Government check.

Three Herndon, Va., youths received three-year suspended sentences from Circuit Court Judge Paul Brown yesterday on housebreaking charges. They were Otis M. Frye, jr., 20; Albert Sudduth, 23, and Leonard Simpkins, 22. All were placed on probation for five years.

An escapee from Virginia State Prison Camp 13, Woodbridge, was handed an additional year sentence by Judge Brown. He is Guy Roach, who was serving a four-year term for housebreaking when he fled a road gang working in Fairfax County.

Ernest B. Swartz, 22, Warrenton, and his brother, Edward Swartz, 26, Winchester, received suspended three-year terms and were placed on probation for five years on charges growing out of the looting of a Centerville filling station in May, 1949.

W. H. Emerson Elected by Auto Group

William H. Emerson, president of Emerson & Orme, Inc., Buick dealers, last night was elected president of the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

Emerson

Emerson, a member of the Kiwanis Club, has lived in the Washington area most of his life. Married, he has three children, Bill and Bob, 12-year-old twins, and Charlotte, 18, a student at Bard College in New York. His residence is 912 Goldsboro rd., Bethesda, Md.

Others elected at the dinner meeting in the Carlton Hotel were: A. Leftwich Sinclair, jr., first vice president; Edwin L. Stohlman, second vice president; Louis S. Jullien, treasurer, and Fred L. Haller, secretary.

I. A. Peake and Frank Small, jr., and Earle C. Baker were elected to three-year terms as directors and Frank G. Stewart to a one-year term. Directors whose terms have not yet expired are M. Marshall Marston, Joseph B. Paul, J. Melford Sanders, Joseph R. Trew and Tom K. Wheeler.

Marc Connelly Warns Of 'Director's' Theater

Marc Connelly, Pulitzer prize-winning playwright, last night warned against a "director's theater."

Connelly, speaking on a Washington Town Hall program in Constitution Hall, described a "director's theater" as one in which directors are more interested in their ideas than in the playwright's. A director's first duty is to the playwright, Connelly said.

Man Unhurt in Plunge

David A. Whitlow, 40, of 4622 43d st. nw., was in Gallinger Hospital yesterday for mental observation after going out a window at the Washington Hotel at 1:40 a. m.

Police said Whitlow went out a third-floor window, but fell only 10 feet, landing on the roof of an adjoining building. He suffered bruises.

Whitlow and his wife, Barbara, are both employed at Bassin's Restaurant, 1347 E st. nw., he as a counterman and she as a waitress.

Mrs. Whitlow told police her husband telephoned their home at 1 a. m. and asked her to come to the hotel.

When Whitlow perched on the window sill, police said, his wife went to get the hotel detective. Whitlow plunged from the window as his wife and the detective entered.

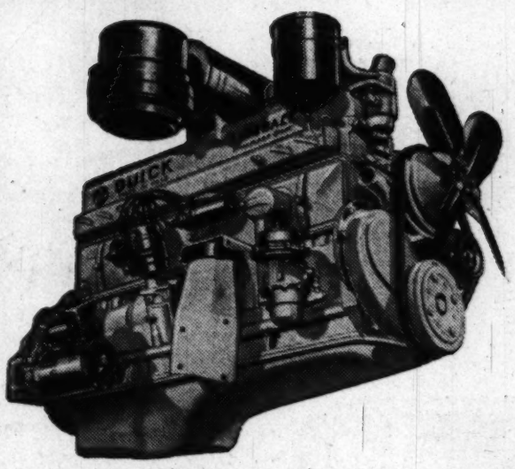
HOTTEST ENGINE NEWS of 1950

That's the word spreading about Buick's brand-new F-263 valve-in-head engine, already proving itself in the hands of new SUPER owners



CALL it if you will the biggest power-story of the year. Call it another triumph in Buick's long history of coming up with car performance beyond compare.

But, sir, when you step into the sleek-lined traveler pictured here—hang on to your hat.

For you'll be riding behind a power plant that is not only new but a major sensation of the 1950 season.

You'll be commanding the very latest word in valve-in-head power—the newest accomplishment of the organization with the country's longest stretch of experience in this engine design.

Here every fist-size fuel charge now delivers a huskier wallop. Shorter, lighter connecting rods mean that pistons flash with faster and livelier action.

Heavier crankshafts, floated on bigger, more rugged bearings, take this greater load and transmit its stepped-up surge to the drive shaft and rear wheels.

And you, behind the wheel, wreathe your face in smiles at the lift you find! At the trigger-quick take-off—the mile-eating cruising stride—your easy disdain for the passing gas pumps.

You and your SUPER are really stepping out—and Buick's good name as "a sweetheart on the road" gains still more lustre.

Nor is road-thrill the only blessing this new power plant brings. Simpler design makes service easier, so upkeep diminishes as a problem. Hydraulic valve-lifters keep valves properly seated for efficient operation—and for quiet unbroken by tappet noise.

And you can have this power either with Buick's easy-shifting Synchro-Mesh transmission or the silken luxury of Dynaflow Drive.*

Either way, this SUPER is certainly something to see. To this top-notch new power it adds style and room, comfort and a wide outlook, soft easy stride and handier new over-all length.

Even the price justifies a prompt trip to your Buick dealer to learn more about Buick for 1950. You'll soon see why so many folks are already saying, "Whatever your price range—better buy Buick!"

*Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER and SPECIAL models.

Features like these mean BUICK'S THE BUY

HIGHER-COMPRESSION Fireball valve-in-head power in three engines, five hp ratings. (New F-263 engine in SUPER models.) • NEW-PATTERN STYLING, with bumper-guard grilles, taper-through fenders, "double bubble" taillights • WIDE-ANGLE VISIBILITY, close-up rear view both forward and back • TRAFFIC-HANDY SIZE, less over-all length for easier parking and garaging, short turning radius • EXTRA-WIDE SEATS cradled between the axles • SOFT BUICK RIDE, from all-coil springing, Safety-Ride rims, low-pressure tires, ride-steadying torque-tube • DYNAFLOW DRIVE standard on all ROADMASTERS, optional at extra cost on SUPER and SPECIAL series • NINETEEN MODELS with Body by Fisher • WIDE CHOICE OF EQUIPMENT adding flexibility to prices that bracket every price range above the lowest.

Senate to Act on Bill Allowing Some Federal Workers to Electioneer

Thousands of Federal workers who live in nearby States could actively participate in politics under a bill to be taken up this week in the Senate.

The measure would permit Government workers to run for local offices on party tickets in any community where they comprise at least 50 percent of the registered voters. It would free Federal employes to engage in active partisan politics in nearby Virginia and Maryland towns as well as scores of communities the country over.

The bill passed the House a year ago in a different form. It merely would give the Civil Service Commission the discretion to fix penalties for violations under the Hatch ("no politics") Act. The act now requires the firing of any employe who violates it.

The Senate Rules Committee, however, approved a second amendment to the Hatch Act to open up partisan political activity to a big bloc of Federal workers. The Civil Service Commission and the Administration has withheld comment on the Senate bill. The Senate leadership has agreed to take up the bill after the oleo bill is disposed of.

INTERNS: Fourteen employes from eight Federal agencies have been selected by Civil Service for its eleventh administrative intern program to begin February 6. They are:

Cumbie Bowen and Arthur M. Martin, Agriculture; Richard B. Belnap and Aubrey A. Gunnels, Army; Eugene G. Brame and John M. Williams, Civil Service; Charles T. Dye, Federal Security; Milton J. Friedman and Donald L. Goodwin, General Services; Richard L. Saintsing, Maritime; Carl W. Eaton and Laurin A. Knutson, Navy, and Edward J. Bush and Harry V. Elkner, VA.

This program is limited to employes in grades GS-7 through GS-11. It will give the trainees responsible experience in planning, budgeting, personnel, and general administration.

STORY: A group of Federal officials was going over the President's budget to see where cuts in it might be made. One of them emphasized the tremendous increase in Federal activities over the past dozen years.

To dramatize his point, he explained that taxes on liquor alone this year will put $2,247,000,000 in the Treasury, an amount greater than the total of all Federal revenues in either 1932 or 1933. A colleague then made this comment:

"That's an idea—maybe we can drink our way to a balanced budget."

PS: Some of my friends seem to be trying it.

At State, Lloyd A. Lehrbas, director of International Information, is being promoted to be an assistant to Undersecretary James Webb . . . At Civil Service, an exam is open for economist, $3825 to $6400 to start. No written test required. Ratings on experience. . . . At General Services, Mary E. Deffer and Geneva Shanklin are retiring. . . . The latest report of the Loyalty Review Board shows that 152 employes have been fired on loyalty charges, but 107 have been restored to their jobs after being cleared.

The average annual wage of the Government's "blue-collar" employee has jumped 23 percent in the past three years to $3000. . . . Between 7500 and 8000 Federal jobs in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are being brought back under the competitive Civil Service system. . . . Civil Service will announce exams later this month for auto mechanics, glassblowers, and operating engineer jobs. No written tests will be given for the jobs to be filled here. . . . The phone operator and supervisor exam will be given here Saturday in the McKinley High School.

Washington Highlands Fights Boost In Bus Fare

Capital Transit Seeking Premium For S. Capitol St. Rush-Hour Traffic

The Washington Highlands area is entitled to bus service over the new South Capitol bridge without having to pay premium fares, the Public Utilities Commission was told yesterday.

Stephen Marinshaw, president of the Washington Highlands Citizens Association, testified at a hearing that a proposed bus route linking the area with downtown Washington should be as profitable to Capital Transit as any in the city.

The company is seeking permission to set up rush-hour express service over the new bridge but at a 5-cent increase in fare.

Buses would operate between Livingston rd. and 3d st. se. and 11th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. with a major pickup stop at Portland and South Capitol sts.

Dean J. Locke, staff engineer for the transit company, said that premium fares would be necessary to make the special service pay its way. He said the new route will cut 15 minutes off the present trip time by way of Nichols ave. and the 11th street bridge.

Locke said the company will have to put on additional buses and personnel since diversion of buses from present routes would reduce service in the Nichols ave. area.

Marinshaw told the commission that at a recent meeting his association unanimously supported a resolution calling on the transit company to supply regular service over the new bridge at regular fares.

The hearing was adjourned for 10 days to give the Washington Marlboro and Annapolis Motor Lines, which has indicated interest in running buses over the new bridge, a chance to participate in the hearings.

Hyattsville Man Attacks CTC Plan

The Capital Transit Co. was accused of "discrimination" in its proposed fare increases for Maryland and the District at a meeting of the Hyattsville City Council last night.

John Peters, who would identify himself only as a citizen and a taxpayer, told the council the company proposes a 2-cent per zone fare increase in Maryland and only 2-cent increase for the entire area of the District.

The council approved proposed amendments to the city's charter that would empower the council to condemn land for off-street parking, pave alleys if 50 percent of the affected property owners petition for the improvement, and construct storm drains where needed, paying 25 percent of the cost and assessing property owners for the balance. The Maryland State Legislature will be asked to approve the proposed amendments.

CTC Sees 1950 Loss Without Fare Boost

Capital Transit will suffer an estimated $160,000 deficit in 1950 unless the Public Utilities Commission grants a fare hike, E. C. Giddings, CT vice president, said last night.

The requested fare boost—a 15-cent fare, six tokens for 80 cents and no passes—would yield CT an additional $1,600,000 in operating income. Giddings told the Shepherd Park Citizens Association. This would mean CT would earn an estimated 5½ percent on its investment, he added.

"If Capital Transit does not get this rate increase," Giddings said," the financial integrity of the company will be jeopardized."

Current rates were expected by PUC experts to yield a 5¾ percent return, Giddings said. Actually they resulted in a 3 percent return, he added.

Bloomingdale

Members of the Bloomingdale Civic Association last night reaffirmed their opposition to the proposed transfer of 500 Cardozo High School students to the Park View School. The measure was suggested by city school officials as a means of alleviating overcrowding at Cardozo.

Members met at the Taber Presbyterian Church, 2d and S sts. nw. They also opposed the proposed fare increase on buses and streetcars.

Interfederation Council

In a discussion of the area's school situation at a meeting of the Interfederation Council last night, Fairfax Delegate Harold A. Ward said the Emergency School Association hopes to arrange a test of television teaching within a month.

An association subcommittee, he said, is tentatively planning to have a Washington television station broadcast a lecture, then test that method against normal teaching methods.

The council voted to send Fred W. Gast, Prince Georges delegate, to a Maryland Public Service Commission hearing in Baltimore January 24, to oppose a Capital Transit Co. request for a two-cent per zone fare increase in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties.

Mrs. Franklin G. Sartwell, District delegate, was elected chairman of the council. Other officers elected Stephen Duvall, Montgomery, first vice chairman; Daniel M. Greene, Prince Georges, second vice chairman; Harold A. Ward, Fairfax, third vice chairman, and Bjorn Oddsson, Arlington, fourth vice chairman. Henry Austin was reelected secretary.

Lincoln Park

The Lincoln Park Citizens Association, meeting last night at Epworth Methodist Church, North Carolina ave. and 13th st. ne., in a resolution addressed to Traffic Director George E. Kenelpp asked a survey of the Union Station area and provision of more parking places there.

The association, which had previously favored radio broadcasts on streetcars, in another action voiced opposition to any increase in streetcar fares.

Miss Olive DeCatur of 326 16th st. ne. was appointed secretary.

Citizens Urge Non-Political PUC Choice

Fort Davis Resolution Asks Truman to Name Qualified Candidate

The Fort Davis Citizens Association last night asked President Truman to nominate a qualified candidate immediately to fill the existing vacancy on the Public Utilities Commission.

The Association requests the President to take into account the prospective candidate's knowledge of utility matters, rather than his political affiliation.

A PUC vacancy has existed since James W. Lauderdale left the commission November 30.

Meeting at the Ryland Methodist Church, the group sent a request to neighbor associations to join it in asking the PUC to hold a hearing on complaints of poor service by the W. M. & A bus company.

The group also asked the Southeast Council to sponsor a census of all pre-school and schoolage children in the area east of the Anacostia River served by the Council.

The Association voted to support a move to name the new South Capitol street bridge after John Howard Payne.

A. B. & W. Case

Strike Threat Cited by State In Bus Brief

The Commonwealth of Virginia yesterday told the Interstate Commerce Commission it is operating the A. B. & W. bus lines because the bus company's ability to serve the public was "bankrupted" by a strike threat.

The contention was made in reply to a complaint by the union employes of the company that the State is exceeding its authority in running the local bus lines between Virginia and the District.

A brief was filed in the case yesterday by the A. B. & W. Transit Co. as well as by the State. Both have asked dismissal of the union's complaint.

Through its State Corporation Commission, the State has been operating the bus lines since last July 21, the deadline set for a strike by the union, Local 131, Association of Street Railway and Motor Coach Employes.

The union had disputed the State's right to run the interstate lines of the company under an ICC regultaion which allows trustees and others to continue such operation for "financially disabled, bankrupt or deceased holders of operating rights."

To the union's contention that these conditions did not exist when the State took over, the State yesterday said in its brief that the A. B. & W.'s facilities were "in fact rendered bankrupt, insofar as its ability to serve the public" is concerned.

Chevy Chase

The Citizens Association of Chevy Chase, D. C., last night noted to oppose a Federation of Citizens Associations suit against a gas rate increase.

In another resolution at its meeting in the Chevy Chase Community Center, the group voted to urge the Board of Trade and other appropriate groups to adopt a plan of Christmas merchandising which would cut down the constant playing of Christmas music.

After a complaint from the floor that the National Guard Association is attempting to take over the top posts in the District National Guard, the Association ordered its National Guard committee to investigate with a view to suggesting appropriate action.

Corning Seeks To Liberalize Faculty Leaves

Board of Education Personnel Group Favors New Plan

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning yesterday asked the Board of Education to liberalize regulations governing a teacher's right to accumulate sick and emergency leave.

The board's committee on personnel approved the superintendent's recommendation that teachers be allowed accrued leave despite occasional periods of absence without pay. The full board will consider the proposal at a 3:30 p.m. meeting Wednesday.

Board President C. Melvin Sharpe scolded absent board members when the committee began its meeting with only one member present. He threatened to shake up committee assignments

Under present sick leave regulation, teachers accumulate a day of leave for each month worked but lose the credit if absent one day or more without pay during the month.

The Corning proposal will make it possible for a teacher to be absent up to 15 days without losing credit and to lose but half a day's credit if absent 15 or more days during a month.

Dr. Corning told committee members that other complaints by teachers over administration of the sick leave measure have resulted from misunderstandings. He said he planned to submit a report indicating that the law which was put into operation for the first time this year has benefited teachers.

Objections have been raised by two teacher unions and a group of high school teachers to present administration of the law.

The personnel committee also approved Dr. Corning's request to hire four educators to lecture to teachers as part of the in-service training program. Educators who will be invited to lecture are Dr. Howard F. Fehr, professor of mathematics at Columbia University's Teachers College; Dr. Raleigh Schorling, professor of education at the University of Michigan; Miss Marie Corrigan, dean of women at Catholic University, and Dr. Angela M. Broening, assistant director of the bureau of measurement, statistics and research of the Baltimore City schools.

Taft Pledges Support for Home Rule

Renews Assurance Of Aid; Over 80 House Members Sign Petition

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) has given sponsors of the Washington home rule bill renewed assurance of his support for the legislation.

In fact, said Taft yesterday, he considers himself one of the sponsors of the home rule bill which passed the Senate and is now before the House. He is Chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee.

Senator Taft said he conferred the past few days with representatives of the Young Republicans' District and national organizations and of the Washington Home Rule Committee.

He said he told the group he will cooperate in every possible way to win approval of the home rule bill, but that he cannot take a direct hand in legislation pending before the House.

After the Senate passed the bill it was referred to the House District Committee, given hearings, and then tabled. The bill is now the target of a discharge petition.

Signatures of a majority (218 members) of the House, would place the bill directly before the House for a vote. More than 80 members have signed.

In Accord With Policy

Senator Taft said he feels it would be in accord with Republican Party policy for House Republicans to sign the discharge petition. He made clear he was not suggesting any criticism of those members who follow a personal policy of not signing discharge petitions. He added: "If they sign any, that is one I think they can sign."

Senator Taft contributed major features of the bill as finally approved by the Senate, and joined its other backers in making a strong appeal for its passage, during Senate debate.

He was the author of the plan, adopted in the Senate bill, for adding two presidential appointees to the membership of the proposed District council. The two would be subject to Senate confirmation. The other nine members would be elected by District voters.

Additional Safeguards

After Taft proposed the two appointive council members, Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) author of the home rule bill, added his indorsement and the plan went into the bill, along with additional safeguards on city borrowing proposed by Taft.

When the bill was before the Senate, Taft spoke for it, declaring:

"Here is a city in which Americans are born and grown up without any right of home rule whatsoever, without any right to participate in the Government which controls their daily affairs and has to do with their daily lives. I myself believe that local self-government is almost as important to liberty as is national government."

9 Traffic Charges Result in Youth's 90-Day Sentence

An 18-year-old youth was convicted yesterday of nine traffic charges and sentenced to 90 days in jail.

He is Mack Goodwin of 221 E st. ne. According to police, he was arrested at 2nd and I sts. ne., after a chase in which he drove over the sidewalk, speeded, passed an official sign, lacked a permit, drove on the wrong side of the street three times, and ran through two stop signs.

In Municipal Court Goodwin was also held under $1000 bond on a charge of breaking into the Jack & Jill Ice Cream Co., 911 2nd st. ne., to steal the car.

According to Assistant United States Attorney Leon Williams, Goodwin also left open some refrigerator doors at the plant, thus damaging $1000 in ice cream.

The meeting is to be held in the District of Columbia Medical Society Auditorium, 1718 M st. nw.

Expert to Study Coroner's Setup

D. C. Coroner Appraisal Ordered in Crime Probe

Harvard Expert Assigned to Study Setup Here, Calls Inquest Outmoded

Dr. Richard Ford, 35, head of Harvard University's department of legal medicine, was assigned yesterday to appraise the District coroner setup for the Special House Committee investigating Washington crime and law enforcement.

Dr. Ford told reporters he feels the coroner's inquest—a feature of the District set-up—is outmoded and time consuming. The decision on this, it was emphasized, will be up to the subcommittee, headed by Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) who announced Ford's appointment.

At the same time, Dr. Ford said the District set-up meets the first test of an effective coroner set-up in that its Coroner is a trained physician, in contrast to many jurisdictions which do not require that the coroner be a doctor.

Serving Since 1934

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald is District coroner. He received his medical training at Georgetown University and has been District coroner since 1934, sevrving as deputy coroner for several years before that.

Dr. McDonald and Dr. Ford met and conferred yesterday. Each said it was a pleasant conference.

Dr. Ford is a native of Cambridge, Mass., and a graduate of Harvard's undergraduate college and medical school. He served in the war as an Army surgeon with the rank of major in the South Pacific. He joined the legal medicine department at Harvard in 1945, and took over the top job last July.

He is staying at the Statler.

Associate Examiner

Beside his post at Harvard, Dr. Ford is an associate medical examiner in Boston, and consultant in pathology for the medical examiners in Massachusetts.

He pointed out that the chief difference between the medical examiner system and the coroner system is that the coroner conducts an inquest, with a coroner's jury, as a preliminary to grand jury and court action; while in the medical examiner systems the parallel preliminary steps are left to the courts.

Roberts' Case Defense Hits Drug Identity

Attorney Questions Qualifications of Government Witness

The Government and defense attorneys in the District Court trial of James M. Roberts, 41, and his wife yesterday tangled over who is qualified to identify a "drug."

Roberts, described as "one of the big fish" in Washington's narcotics traffic, and his red-haired wife, Evalina, are charged with illegal transfer of drugs.

Early in the day, Assistant United States Attorney Arthur McLaughlin introduced as evidence six cigarettes the Government contends contain marijuana, 17 ounces of bulk "stuff" and nine capsules of what McLaughlin alleges is cocaine.

According to testimony, Federal Narcotics Agent Howard Chappell and his undercover man, James Watson, insist they secured the evidence at Roberts' apartment, 744 Girard st. nw., during the weekend of October 8.

No Personal Knowledge

Under cross-examination, Defense Attorney James Lyman made Chappell admit he "had no personal knowledge" whether the substances smoked and passed around in Roberts' apartment were drugs.

When Dr. Albert A. Spear, Bureau of Internal Revenue chemist the past 31 years, identified No. 1 as a cigarette butt "containing marijuana," Lyman hopped to his feet, declaring that the witness was "not qualified" to make that statement.

Lyman then proceeded to question Dr. Spear on his formal training in organic chemistry and produced several chemistry text books, asking the witness if he had ever read or used them.

Dr. Spear is expected to continue his testimony when the trial resumes before Judge F. Dickinson Letts at 10 a. m. today.

Gets "Dope" On Language

In earlier testimony, Chappell developed these dope circle slang expressions and translations: "Pot" and "stuff" (marijuana), "get a piece" (term for asking for a whole ounce of heroin or cocaine), "do up" (roll a marijuana cigarette), "get your nose cleaned" (sniff cocaine) and a "square" (a person who does not use dope).

All of these terms, Chappell testified, were bandied about during his several visits in Roberts' apartment last October.

Roberts and his wife were arrested following a citywide Federal-Metropolitan Police raid October 18.

Lieut. Col. Loren Jenks, Army chaplain who recently returned from the Orient, will speak on "Will Japan Become Christian?" at a dinner at 6:15 p. m. Thursday in the National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle nw.

Damage Award Against Store Here Upheld

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed a $17,000 damage award to a 4-year-old girl injured in 1945, when she caught her hand in a department store escalator.

The little girl is Betty-Lynne Jacobsen, daughter of S. Elmer Jacobsen, of Provo, Utah. The award was against the Hecht Co.

Betty-Lynne, who was in the store with her mother and a 7-year-old sister, broke away from them on the descending stairs. Betty-Lynne fell and as she tried to rise caught her right hand in an aperture. The small finger had to be amputated and plastic surgery was necessary for scars which developed.

In stressing the high degree of care that department stores must exercise in relation to children, Judge David Bazelon said:

"We think that the owner of a department store must be held to be presumptively aware of the tendency of children to stray even from vigilant parents, especially when subjected to the varied fascinations found in such a store."

Jacobsen and Betty-Lynne were represented by Attorney Lester Wood.

Minor Held Unable to Sue Adult for Breach of Promise

A minor cannot collect damages on charges that a third party alienated the affections or support of its parents, the United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday.

The opinion was handed down in the case of James Edler, jr., 14, of Chicago, who had asked $50,000 damages from English-born Miss Nora MacAlpine-Downie, insisting that she "wrongfully enticed" his father from his home.

Young Edler's suit, brought by Attorney Nicholas J. Chase, contended that Miss MacAlpine-Downie also "induced" his father, an Army lieutenant colonel, to desert him and his mother.

"In the absence of legislation expressly authorizing it," wrote Judge Wilbur K. Miller, "an action of this sort cannot be maintained in the District of Columbia."

In so doing, the Appeals Court upheld a District Court dismissal of the case in 1948 and an earlier Appeals Court ruling.

$50,000 Prize Winner Shies At Champagne; Tax Cut Hurts

What would you do if you just found out you had won $50,000 cash and two cars in a contest you had spent 200 hours puzzling out?

Shout, laugh, call the boss and tell him what you really think—then celebrate with champagne?

Whatever you'd do, here's what William Crissman, 28, Washington sales assistant, did yesterday when he learned he'd won exactly that, $50,000 and two cars, in the Disabled American Veterans word puzzle:

Reached for a little book he had in his Baltimore home that told him how much of the $50,000 he'd have to pay in Federal and State taxes. He figured he'd keep about $30,000.

Decided he'd sell the two cars and figured he'd have to pay about 50 percent in taxes on the sale prices.

Advised his wife not to get too excited.

And reported back for work in the Westinghouse Electric Supply Co. office here.

Crissman disclosed that his parents were divorced when he was 6 years old and he has been working ever since. First he worked part-time to earn board at an Episcopal farm school. Then at the Boys Home Society in Baltimore, he did household chores while going to school.

"Maybe now for the first time I'll see life through rose-colored glasses," he mused.

What are his plans now?

The Washington Post
WILLIAM CRISSMAN

"Well, I think we'll take a little vacation, about two weeks, somewhere in a tropical climate. I'll buy some clothes—and of course so will my wife," he added.

Then he'll return to work at $3000 a year—"invest the money soundly and maybe eventually open a hardware store, that's the kind of thing I've handled since I was 17."

Safe Jobs Not Such Safe Jobs For 5 Held in $12,500 Bond

Yesterday was "Safe Day" for U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence as he held five men in $2500 bond each in connection with two safe jobs.

The cases were continued until January 25 to give the men time to obtain counsel.

James Nelson, 42, of 2350 6th st. nw., and David James Wilson, 48, of 614 2d st. nw., were held in the attempted theft of a safe early Sunday morning from the Federal Beef Co., 478 L st. nw.

Police also have charged Nelson and Wilson with a second count of housebreaking in the entering of a poultry firm, at 480 L st. nw.

The other men arraigned before Lawrence were Cary W. Holmes, 41, of 4518 Canal rd. nw.; Charles M. Thorn, 24, of 1612 U st. se., and Richard J. Elam, 21, of 1526 Good Hope rd. se.

They were arrested Sunday and charged with stealing a safe November 27 from the Stagecoach Restaurant, 1306 Good Hope rd. se.

Police say the men have admitted getting $859 from the safe and $167 from a cash register and later dropping the 150-pound safe in the Potomac River.

The Chilean Military Mission yesterday reported the weekend theft of a 3-pound safe from its quarters at 2128 Bencroft pl. nw. It contained $8.91 in stamps and petty cash.

German Arms King Gustav Krupp Dies

Duesseldorf, Germany, Jan. 16 (U.P.).—Gustav Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach, who once was one of the world's greatest munitions makers, died today at Muehlbach near Salzburg, Austria, it was announced here. He was 79.

Gustav Krupp

Krupp, who formerly headed the huge industrial plant known by that name, had been ill since 1943. He suffered a stroke three days before he was scheduled to go on trial at Nuernberg in 1946 with top Nazi leaders. He had been in a coma most of the time since then. His son, Alfred, was tried in his place.

Under the elder Krupp's guidance, the huge Krupp works built armaments for Germany in two wars.

He was born at The Hague, the Netherlands, August 7, 1870, where his father served as minister for the German state of Baden.

Parents Born in United States

His full name at that time was Bohlen und Halbach. When he married Bertha Krupp, the Kaiser, who attended the wedding, gave him the title of Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach in order to perpetuate the name of Krupp.

[Krupp's father and mother were born in Philadelphia, Pa., according to the Associated Press. His mother's father, Henry Bohlen, was a general in the Union Army during the American Civil War and was killed in the Battle of Rappahannock.]

At the age of 19, Krupp went to Washington to become a secretary at the German Embassy, and later served in Peiping and the Vatican.

In 1906 he became head of the big Krupp works at Essen, which built "Big Bertha," the heaviest gun of World War I. The gun was named after his wife.

After the First World War, he had charge of converting the works back to peacetime production.

Broke With Hitler

During the Ruhr occupation in 1923, Krupp and several of his directors were arrested by the French. He was given a prison sentence but released in a few months under an amnesty decree.

When the Nazis came into power, Krupp became top man in industry, and was in close contact with the Nazi government leaders. But in 1934 he resigned from the "industry group" active under the Nazis and was rumored to have broken with Hitler and his co-workers over economic policies.

In the last war, Krupp was relegated to a background position and his son, Alfred, became the main figure in running the munitions works.

Of West Virginia

E. F. Morgan Dies; Former Governor

Gov. Morgan

Ephraim Franklin Morgan, former Governor of West Virginia and retired solicitor of the Department of Commerce, died Sunday night at Bethesda Naval Hospital, where he had been a patient since December 21.

Services were conducted last night at the W. W. Chambers Co. chapel, 1400 Chapin st. nw., with the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, chaplain of the United States Senate, officiating. Services will also be held at 2 p. m. Wednesday at Fairmont, W. Va., Mr. Morgan's former home, with burial there.

Mr. Morgan, a native of Marion County, W. Va., was a descendant of Morgan Morgan, the State's first white settler. He attended the Fairmont State Normal School and in 1897 received a law degree from the University of West Virginia.

He began the practice of law in Fairmont, and in 1901 became city attorney. From 1907 to 1912 he served as judge of the Intermediate Court of Marion County, and from 1915 to 1920 he was a member of the State Public Service Commission.

Mr. Morgan, a Republican, served as Governor from 1921 to 1924.

During his period as Governor, union leaders were struggling to organize the coal miners in the State and he several times had to ask for Federal troops as violence broke out.

From 1927 to 1933 he served as Commerce Department solicitor and for a period was Acting Secretary. The former Governor served as a sergeant in the Spanish-American War.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Alma Bennett Morgan, whom he married in 1902. They had lived at the Hotel Mayflower since 1938. Also surviving are a son, Albert Morgan, of Morgantown, W. Va., an attorney; and three sisters, Mrs. M. L. West, Mrs. R. H. Hahn and Mrs. W. L. Meredith, all of Fairmont.

Marshall, ankle on pillow, tells brothers, Carter, 9, and Robert, 6, about his rescue from quarry Sunday

Young Marshall Gibson's narrow escape when he missed plunging to his death in an abandoned quarry by a few feet on Sunday marked the second time the 12-year-old boy's life was miraculously spared.

Three years ago, after a sledding accident, his heart actually stopped beating for five minutes during an operation, his mother revealed yesterday.

Marshall, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Douglas Gibson, of 214 Rosemary st., Chevy Chase, was rescued by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad from a narrow ledge 5 feet above a 40-foot depth of icy water in the bottom of an old quarry near River rd., Bethesda.

The boy slipped to the ledge from a wire cable he was descending to photograph frogs in the quary. Thought at first to have suffered a fractured ankle, it was later learned he was only bruised and shaken.

His earlier and more dramatic brush with death occurred after his sled crashed into a tree on "Suicide Hill," a coasting area near Chevy Chase Junior College, when he was 9.

Mrs. Gibson said the impact drove his stomach against the back of the sled.

During an operation for removal of his spleen, Marshall regurgitated, his mother recalled, and inhaled the fluid into his lungs, nearly suffocating him.

"He died right there on the operating table for five minutes," Mrs. Gibson said, "before he was brought back to life."

G. H. Hayden Dies; Native Of Alexandria

George H. Hayden 3d, 28, son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Hayden jr., of 439 14th st. se., died Sunday at Garfield Hospital of a heart ailment, after a brief illness.

A native, of Alexandria, Va., and a veteran of World War II, Mr. Hayden was preparing to go into business for himself when he became ill.

After attending the public schools in Alexandria, he moved to Washington with his family and was graduated from Eastern High School in 1939. He majored in business administration at George Washington University prior to joining the Washington office of the General Electric Co. as a salesman.

While attending the university, he was active in the Hi-Y and the Tau Sigma Rho fraternity.

During the war he served as a technical sergeant with the 107th Replacement Battalion. He was stationed in London with the headquarters staff for some time, and his assignments included several special missions in battle areas of the European theater of operations.

After his return to this country, Mr. Hayden was assigned to the radio and communications center at the Pentagon. He held a presidential unit citation for outstanding service. He was released from the Army in 1947.

About eight months ago Mr. Hayden was married to the former Miss Elizabeth M. Kelley of Philadelphia, who survives.

Mr. Hayden was active in golf and was a member of the Congressional Country Club here.

Gen. Arnold To Be Buried On Thursday

General of the Air Force Henry H. (Hap) Arnold, who died Sunday at his California ranch house, will be buried Thursday in Arlington National Cemetery.

The White House said that at President Truman's direction, the presidential plane "Independence" left Washington at 8:08 a. m. yesterday to pick up Mrs. Arnold and other members of the family in California and bring them to Washington at 8 a. m. Wednesday.

An Air Force plane carrying the 63-year-old general's body will arrive in Washington two hours later. President Truman will attend the funeral, tenatively set for 3 p. m. Thursday, the Air Force announced.

Between the time the body arrives in Washington and time of the service, the general will lie in State at the chapel at Fort Myer.

America's ranking airman of World War II and a pioneer in military aviation, General Arnold died of a heart condtion at his home in the Valley of the Moon, 40 miles north of San Francisco and near Sonoma, Calif.

The ailment, his physician disclosed, should have forced him to retire in 1944, but General Arnold "decided to take his chance with the rest of the soldiers." He retired June 30, 1946.

The Nation's leaders praised the Air Force chief yesterday as the man most responsible for America's air strength in World War II.

Mrs. Eleanor Arnold, widow of the general, urged yesterday that no flowers be sent to the funeral services. Instead, she suggested contributions to the Air Force Aid Society as an appropriate tribute to General Arnold.

Science Makes Marketing Easy—and Stylish, Too

HANDICOAT IS THE NAME for this sleek little coverall, which is equipped with enough built-in gadgets to make Rube Goldberg happy. Besides being handy, however, it's a stylish garment for everyday street wear, as this full-length photograph shows. The fabric is a neat cotton check, treated against rain and wrinkles. The lines are classically simple. Notice the neat zipper fastening down the front

Researchers Offer New Miracle Coat

By John W. Ball

FOR FOUR YEARS Congress has voted huge sums to agricultural research—to discover new ways to increase the consumption of agricultural products.

The latest thing the researchers have come up with is a coat for women to wear when marketing. They say their invention makes it so easy for a woman to shop and to carry home what she buys that she'll buy more.

The new creation is called a handi-coat. It was designed by Clarice Scott, clothing specialist for the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics. It can be made for $10. Since she first exhibited the sample garment two weeks ago, 35 clothing manufacturers have asked permission to make it, and a score of pattern companies want to use it.

Besides selling more vegetables, etc., the coat will provide another market for cotton, now fighting for its life against synthetic fibers. The coat is both wrinkle and rain resistant, and besides, it has:

1. So many handy pockets you can leave your handbag at home.

2. A detachable hood with a transparent visor.

3. A slot in one sleeve for a grocery list, and a small pocket in the seam for paper handkerchiefs. A pencil on a bead chain and a fountain pen fit in the lower right pocket with the wallet.

4. A checkbook on a chain in a lower left-hand pocket. Also a place for the wallet, with a zipper fastener.

5. For bus riders the right-hand pocket has a holder for dimes or tokens attached to a pull-chain that automatically springs back into the pocket.

6. An accessory shoulder-strap plastic carry-all for the grocery bag.

HERE'S A CLOSE-UP of the matching carryall accessory which comes with the handicoat, and makes marketing easy. Made of plastic trimmed with checked fabric, the carryall holds a good-sized grocery bag. It's designed with shoulder-straps to lighten the weight of heavy bundles which might be a little too much for arms alone to carry. A transparent plastic cover slips over the top of the groceries when the weather is bad.

"PUT IT ON THE CUFF" becomes a reality in the new wonder coat. A tiny pad for jotting down marketing lists fits into a slot in one sleeve, while the necessary pencil attached to a bead chain fits in the lower right pocket. There's also a fountain pen attached, should you want to sign checks. And there's another slot in the sleeve for paper handkerchiefs.

ANYBODY WHO'S EVER FUMBLED AROUND for a streetcar token (which is to say everybody in Washington) will appreciate the installation above. In the miracle coat's right-hand pocket lurks a neat little tubular container for dimes or tokens, attached to a pull-chain which automatically springs back into the pocket when released.

Despite a brisk wind which scattered the scent of the fox, the Loudoun Hun had a good run Saturday which kept the field out for four hours. Starting at 11 o'clock at Woodburn, 20 or more riders found the going perfect and from 11 a. m. to 3 p. m., rode over to Mount Gilead and covered the surrounding areas, finishing their ride at the Metzger place. The hounds failed to jump a fox during the run.

The field, led by Miss Anna F. Hedrick and Hunton F. Atwell, joint masters, included Mrs. Jane Pohl Rust, Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. White, Mrs. Burdette S. Wright, Mrs. Betsy Brundage, Dr. Enos Ray, W. Baylor Metzger, Charles S. Sydnor, C. H. Kephart, Misses Barbara and Nancy Graham, Miss Adele Hawthorne, Miss Jean Anderson, Bob Griffith, "Skippy" Bishop, Henry Bishop, Joe Rogers and Miss Marilyn Patton.

Mrs. H. H. Lefferts left this week for Florida, where she will be the guest of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Ramsey, at Miami. Miss Betty Strawbridge is leaving Sunday for Sarasota, Fla., where she will spend the winter months, returning to Leesburg in April. Mr. and Mrs. Hayden B. Harris left Tuesday for Punta Gorda, Fla., to spend the winter months.

Mrs. Arthur S. Jenkins will go to Richmond this week for a meeting of the Board of Governors of the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs, which will be held Tuesday and Wednesday at the Jefferson Hotel. A feature of the meeting will be the banquet on Tuesday evening. On Wednesday afternoon the group will be the guests of Miller & Rhoads at a tea and fashion show. The State officers and the presidents of the various clubs will attend the sessions.

Meet Mrs. Romney!

She is our typical woman customer.

Careful about choosing what she calls "lines that are kind to my figure."

She scrutinizes fabric, scorns fussiness but approves fine detail and insists there be a bit of dash and life to her clothes. All she wants is good, and good-looking clothes at reasonable prices. We had Mrs. Romney very much in mind as we chose these first new dresses of Spring. Appropriately, the theme is print. The invitation to see them is extended to all of our many women customers who see eye-to-eye on fashion, and Value, with Mrs. Romney!

Mary Haworth's Mail

Television Is Wonderful, Yes; But Woman Feels She Cannot Tolerate It Much Longer In Her Household Without Losing Her Mind

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is something wrong with me, that I am developing "television nerves?" Television is wonderful. I enjoy it. I am sociable, too, and enjoy programs more when I share them with a group. Also I don't mind too much cleaning up afterwards, although such cleaning adds at least 10 hours to my work week nowadays.

My objection is not to the video programs nor to the friendly throngs they lure, but to the crowding out of all other potential interests. There are five of us at home—three youngsters, ages 11, 15 and 17; my husband and myself—and apparently I am the only one of us who would occasionally rather do anything other than let video take over. There is hardly an hour of television time when some program doesn't appeal to someone in the family; hence save only for a few brief hours of school (and even these interrupted by lunch) we have video on,—and on, and on, and on.

My nerves are cracking up. I literally cannot live this way, sanely, much longer. Even when I am alone and the set is beautifully silent, the aerial moans in the wind to the point of actually vibrating walls, woodwork and floors. I've searched from basement to attic for escape from video noise, but there is no place where it fails to penetrate. If such a spot could be found I'd settle there without protest when I prefer quiet, for I feel uncomfortably selfish (perhaps - shouldn't) in pleading "No television this evening, please."

Longs for Escape From Modern Noise

MY INTERESTS, aside from rearing five wonderful children (two married), include painting, dabbling in other forms of art, writing for pay, knitting, sewing, ESP research, reading science, biography and detective fiction; and playing poker, bridge and canasta. Incidentally, I am 50, my neck was broken two years ago, is healed now (more or less); and in this recuperative period I've had two (successful) operations on my eyes.

Surely I'm not the only one in this noise-infested land of television, radioed automobiles, busses, street cars, etc., who yearns for occasional silence. And my problem isn't lack of "Peace of Mind." I've read that wonderful book (before video, not since) and when I have a chance to use mind, I am the most contented person imaginable. Can you advise me how to increase my potential powers of concentration amidst noise and confusion? V. V.

Radio Engineer Has Viewpoint

DEAR V. V.: For better or worse, television has become a reality in modern man's environment, and those who vouchsafe it house room in a spirit of curiosity soon learn (if they're wise) to use it moderately in order to get best dividends of enjoyment from it, at minimum punishment or penalty. Such is the gist of a remarkably interesting statement I've just had from a top radio engineer, whose slant I asked on your behalf (since I don't live with video).

This youngish man of thoughtful mind, himself a parent, owner of a video set, who has tinkered with radio since his boyhood, and who is a sturdy sustaining member of his community, says video in the home can be injurious to all-around social growth (at any age) unless its use is rationed selectively.

Once a television set is installed, he recommends foresighted rescheduling of time allocated to recreations, with children given a collective hour-a-day for video, and the parents such time as they might otherwise give to a movie or concert—which might be two hours twice a week. Then a policy of "fair divide" about choosing the programs can be worked out.

Flat Negatives Are Profitless

HE REMINDS that "flat negatives" are profitless in human dealings, and finds that a policy of disciplined personal example and reasonable arbitration with the children has taken the potential headache out of television in his household. "In arbitration, one may lose at times, but it keeps one moving towards a better balance in personal relations," he remarks. Which is a gem of wisdom, useful in any case.

In conclusion, our veteran of video offers two suggestions, one as an engineer, the other as a student of human nature. They are: 1. The aerial moaning and accompanying vibrations may be caused by a loosely attached band of transmission wiring, and the cure for that is to tightly tape the band of wiring to the lead-in post or pole. Have the outside wiring checked, and if that's not the trouble, have the installation job gone over in search of badly joined wiring inside.

2. Video reception brings a new phase of life, a new social factor, into the home. If you don't like it and feel inclined to side against it, that's legitimate; but don't make video the goat for nervous tension that may have its roots in unfaced fears and longstanding frustrations. M. H.

Police Auxiliary Supporting Drive

More than 125 members of the Women's Auxiliary of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club yesterday voted 100 percent support of the present drive for 150,000 adult memberships. The vote came during a rally-luncheon at the Ambassador Hotel, highlighted by speches from three campaign leaders.

Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett, honorary chairman of the drive told members that established of a Police Boys Club in each precinct, depends on success of the drive.

Wash B. Williams, general chairman of the campaign, said that cooperation of women members will help in realizing the $300,000 goal.

Drucie Admits She Can't Cook—But Her Fiance Can

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

WHEN Drucie Snyder walks down the aisle to become Mrs. John Ernest Horton on January 26, she'll wear a gown which is American made.

The material came from Japan—Tokyo and Kyoto—brought back by Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder for his daughter's wedding day. The designer is Mme. Brune of Washington, who has fashioned an exquisite Elizabethan wedding gown perfectly adapted to the tall slim lines of the bride-to-be. At a press conference yesterday held at Mme. Brune's salon, we viewed both the dress and the veil. But we promised Drucie not to tell all.

Forty-eight yards of material have gone into the making of this artist's creation. Ingeniously, Mme. Brune has designed an underdress of satin to serve later as an evening gown when the train is removed and packed away for a future Horton bride.

As excited as any bride should be, Drucie nevertheless faced the dozen newsgals with aplomb.

We bombarded her with questions. "Can you cook?" "Where are you going to live?" "What's the color scheme for your apartment?" "What about those traditional bride's items: Something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue?"

No, she can't cook, Drucie said. But she's going to learn and in the meantime, her fiance is perfectly at home in the kitchen, loves to cook and can make a wonderful Swiss steak.

She has found an apartment here and has selected her furniture, which is French provincial. The decor will combine, red, green, gold, eggshell and gray.

When her wedding day comes the bride-elect will no doubt have collected her four "musts" for a bride. But right now all she has are blue garters, sent to her by Mrs. Farrell at Garfinckel's.

Greek Finance Minister Dinner Guest Tonight

THE Ambassador of Greece and Mme. Dendramis are entertaining at a dinner this evening in honor of His Excellency, the Minister of Finance of Greece and Mme. George Mantzavinos, who are to be in Washington this week at the Shoreham Hotel. Dinner will be at the embassy at 8 o'clock.

Mme. Dendramis has announced that the Cavalcade of Easter Fashions, for which she held an organizing tea last week, will be shown on Easter Thursday, April 13, at the Mayflower Hotel. Mrs. Truman has consented to be the guest of honor on this occasion.

Fashions to be shown are being sent over by Mrs. Henry Grady, wife of the United States Ambassador to Greece. Over 75 models, all made by Greek couturiers, have been selected, with hats, pocketbooks and shoes to match. Money raised from the project will go to the Queen's Refugee Fund. Both Queen Frederick and Mrs. Grady are patronesses.

Carl Brisson, Danish-born singer who is appearing at the Embassy Room at the Statler, was honor guest at a small luncheon given yesterday by the Danish Ambassador and Mme. de Kauffman. Other guests were members of the embassy staff and their wives.

Princess Wan Waithayakon, wife of the Thailand Ambassador, was a guest without the Ambassador who is in New York; and others were Princess Yuzala, visiting here from Bangkok.

'Bipartisan Spending' Hit By O'Mahoney in Club Talk

"We have a bipartisan policy on domestic spending just as much as we have a bipartisan policy on war expenditures," Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) charged yesterday.

He claims that Republicans protest in advance appropriations for farm assistance, social security benefits and other Administration welfare projects, "but when it comes to the actual balloting there are very few dissenting votes."

The Wyoming Senator spoke in defense of the Administration's new budget at the luncheon meeting of the Women's National Democratic Club.

Reactionaries and isolationists in this country use the phrase "Government spending" as an indirect attack against the Administration and its efforts toward a successful peace, the Senator asserted.

He pointed out that expenditures for the "so-called Welfare State" will get .06 of the 1950 dollar, wheras .13 of each dollar is spent on "war-connected" expenses.

Nearly our entire budget is paying for the last war, he said, "which is definitely not a partisan expense."

The Senator stressed the importance of sound economy in this country. "If the United States has another depression like the one in '29, freedom will disappear, forming a vacuum for communism." He also said America must maintain its role as world leader.

"There is no iron curtain that can bar the knowledge of a stable and prosperous economy of the United States."

How to Avoid Transporting Ant Colony

We are living in an apartment which is quite permeated by little red ants. We have been told they are in the ground and walls, for no amount of exterminating has completely cleared them from my house or those of my neighbors. In fact, now in the winter time when we have pretty well cleared them out of the kitchen, I find one or two amid my linens and even upstairs in my clothing. I have a feeling they are in my furniture and in the folds of linens, etc.

We have bought a new home and are most eager not to take any unwelcome guests along with us. How can we safely treat out furniture, china, glassware, clothing to be sure we are getting a fresh start when we move? F.M.P.

In order to transport an ant infestation it is necessary to move the entire colony which includes the queen. Since a colony usually consists of a cluster of ants as big as your two hands, it isn't at all likely you would move it without knowing it. Then, too, colonies are usually established within partitions, foundations, etc. The stray ant you move will not reproduce and will soon die when separated from the colony.

My baby daughter will be 1 year old in March and I would like to have a small party for her. There are five children and their mothers whom I would invite. Since these children are quite young (about 18 months), refreshments, games, etc., must be simple. Can you offer any suggestions as to refreshments, games, and how long the party should last? J. R. T.

With children of very tender years it really doesn't work out well to have a party with planned games. I'd suggest you just invite your friends with their babies to drop in during the late afternoon, after naps, for light refreshments. The little guests could bring along their own favorite toy with which to play.

The refreshments could be a birthday sponge or angel cake with a light icing and ice cream. A tiny gift for each guest could be placed before their place at the table so they will have something to unwrap and take home.

It will save accidents, while refreshments are eaten, if places are laid for the small children at a card table placed on the floor without legs extended. The children can then sit on the floor before the table and there will be no chance of falling off improvised high chairs. As an added accident preventive you could place washable throw rugs or even newspapers over the rug and under the table area to catch the crumbs. With such advance precautions, both you and the other mammas will be able to enjoy the party.

I would like to know how to remove decals from a painted wall. I've tried soap, vinegar, paint cleaner, washing powder and scraping with a knife and razor blade. They hardly made a dent. F. G. D.

There is a new product on the market designed especially for removing decals. It comes in the form of a treated card which is dipped in hot water to become thoroughly moistened and is placed over the decal. A softening agent in the card forces moisture into the tough film of lacquer and loosens the adhesive on the back of the decal. After several hours or overnight the decal may be peeled off with a dull table knife or fingernail. Each card is good for several applications and is large enough to cover completely a large decal or may be cut into sections to fit smaller sizes. It is sold at hardware, paint, variety and dime stores.

If this remover does not loosen the decal, it is possible that it was applied to the painted surface before the paint was thoroughly dry and can be removed only with the paint.

How could I soften the leather on the sleeve of a leather jacket? The sleeve is stiff and hard. It was purchased at a sale and I was unaware of the defect? A. V.

Applying a good leather renewer to the sleeve should soften it. This is a creamy liquid which is sold for use on shoes. If it is possible to get to the reverse side of the leather, apply the renewer there, also. Sponge it on with a soft cloth, let stand for an hour or so to become absorbed, and then rub it gently between the hands. Repeat the process as long as the renewer is absorbed.

Can you tell me what will remove lime deposit, caused from hard water, from aluminum cooking utensils? Also, from same cause, gray deposit on white porcelain basin in the bath, around the faucets.

If this is a hard lime deposit in the bottom of a tea kettle, it can be softened and removed by filling the kettle with a solution of water and vinegar. Use one cup vinegar to a quart of water and bring the solution to a boil in the kettle. Allow to stand overnight.

If the deposit is too heavy to be completely removed by this method, heat the dry kettle very gently over a low flame. The expansion of the metal is usually enough to crack off the deposit.

The gray deposit can be removed from the wash basin by wetting a cloth in vinegar, touching it to a scratchless scouring powder and rubbing the deposit.

Fancy-Schmancy!

Forest Van Slyck's Pet Aversion All Came Out In the Bathroom Wash

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THE Nation's Capital, usually so socially staid, has been going deliciously zany of late, with the local gentry fancy-dressing for parties and hostesses arranging entertainments in artificially exotic settings.

Prize winner of the Waltz Group's Friday night Bal de Tete, at which everyone wore headgear depicting either a superstition or pet aversion, was De Forest Van Slyck. The usually staid Mr. Van Slyck's head was draped a la Arab with a miniature chromium towel rack from which were suspended the usual articles of feminine lightwash which festoon all too many masculine-shared bathrooms—stockings, a bra, washcloths, other more intimate items.

On Saturday night some of New York's snappiest fashion plates were briefly in town for the Dancing Class—among them Mrs. Ailsa Mellon Bruce, daughter of the late Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon, whose gown was strapless, black velvet with an enormous pouf of a pink satin skirt. Mrs. Byron Foy (one of the ten best-dressed United States women) wore an ocean of white tulle, its white satin bodice looping low in huge pannier petals. Mrs. James Russell Lowell appeared in quite the most effective creation of all: bouffant, pale-pale pink satin adrift with black velvet leaves. Julia Lowell, who heads Elizabeth Arden's Gotham dressmaking salon, week-ended not only to attend the dancing class, but also to set up a fashion luncheon to be given at the Mayflower on January 31 for the benefit of the Providence Hospital.

The show will feature the complete spring ready-to-wear collection of Castillo, Miss Arden's designer. The dresses will be flown from New York in the morning, flown back at night and the models will come along, too. It's the first time the collection has ever been shown complete outside New York and it promises to be quite an occasion for the sartorially conscious.

On the eighteenth, Miss Rhoda Low, the most active gourmet hereabouts, is giving a Satai dinner for some 58 of her friends. A Satai, in case you don't know, is a Malayan dish concocted of skewered lamb with a mysterious sauce. The dinner will feature authentic Malayan dishes, cooked by Rudi Moder, a chef at the Washington Hotel who is an old Singapore hand, and will start off appropriately with gin slings made from the recipe used at Singapore's famous Raffles Hotel. Since the Scot influence is stressed by British residents in Malaya, the guests will be piped into dinner by bagpiper Thomas Dow. Rhoda hails from Bristol, R. I., but was brought up in New York, traveled a great deal with her father, the late William Gilman Low, and became interested in good food. Though she's really an artist, she started collecting recipes as one would stamps, and amassed over a thousand unusual ones which she simplified for easy usage. She recently brought out a calendar called Rhoda's Recipes, which combined food and seasons appropriately, and soon will publish a cookbook.

Next Move to Baltimore

NOW that almost everyone has seen the National Gallery's Austrian Collection, the next move is to trek to Baltimore and see the fabulous Cone collection which opened last Tuesday. The collection, which is valued at over three million dollars, is the most comprehensive Matisse collection known and surpasses even the artist's private store of paintings.

Besides the Matisse group and numerous Picassos, almost every modern painter is represented. In addition, there is almost half a million dollars worth of antique jewelry and a display of fantastic old textiles.

The Cones, Dr. Frederic, his sisters, Dr. Claribel and Etta, were cousins of Gertrude Stein. Miss Stein started them buying modern paintings to help her favorite proteges, when the now great artists were practically unknown.

Paintings, sculptures and textiles were acquired almost haphazardly but with the most exquisite taste. They were all kept in the Cones' apartment where, since the owners were completely un-publicity-minded, very few people saw them. Last August the last Cone, Etta, died, leaving the complete collection, plus $400,000 to erect a building, to the Baltimore Art Museum. Interesting angle of the wonderful display is the myriad vases filled with beautiful, fresh flowers scattered throughout the museum. The Cones were crazy about flowers and the museum directors carry on the tradition.

Say It Again, Ken!

THE MOST persuasive argument for the removal of the much discussed excise tax was broadcast recently by upstate New York's Republican Representative Ken Keating. Congressman Keating's main argument for cosmetics tax removal was that an attractive woman is a necessity, not a luxury. And that without lipstick a woman couldn't be attractive.

Since his epoch-making broadcast, Mr. Keating (who is no relation to the magician Fred Keating) has been inundated with letters from appreciative ladies and is having the time of his legislative life.

Didden in Line For Presidency Of Bank Group

By S. Oliver Goodman

George A. Didden jr. will serve as general convention chairman for the June meeting of the D. C. Bankers Association at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., it was announced last night by President George M. Fisher.

Didden, president of the National Capital Bank, thus will be "in line" for association leadership three years hence.

More than 300 bankers and guests attended the midwinter session of the association last night in the Mayflower. Guest speaker was Representative Dewey Short, Republican from Missouri, who outlined some of the problems facing this Congress and also gave observations of his recent trip to Europe.

Another speaker was Barnum L. Colton, president of the National Bank of Washington, who gave the annual report of association's commercial trade activities committee.

Colton gave some meaty figures on Washington's growth during the past decade. In 1939, he said, assessed value of land and improvements here was $1,211,000,000. In 1949, it had risen to $1,636,000,000. In the 1939 fiscal year, he continued, 102,983 District income taxpayers filed returns and paid $3,200,000. In the 1949 fiscal year, 103,138 paid $11,511,500.

Among the guests were Clark Daniel, president of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington; Thomas L. Anglin, president of the Washington Stock Exchange; F. P. H. Siddons, president of the Board of Trade; John L. Laskey, president of D. C. Bar Association; Oliver M. Walker, president of Washington Real Estate Board; Fred A. Smith, president of D. C. Building and Loan League, and William J. McCausland, president of D. C. Life Underwriters Association.

NEW POWER PEAK: Sales of Potomac Electric Power Co. set a new all-time peak of 2,095,954,530 kilowatt hours in 1949, an increase of 4.49 percent over the previous year. For the District of Columbia alone, sales aggregated 1,481,605,047 kilowatt hours for a gain of 4.14 percent. December sales in the city were up 1.63 percent over the same 1948 month, while suburban sales spurted 8 percent.

ODD LOTS: Citizens Building & Loan Association of Silver Spring reports assets are now in excess of $7,300,000, a gain of $700,000 for 1949 . . . Mid-Atlantic Appliances Co. played host to nearly 2000 dealers in Washington at a display of the new Admiral line of television and electrical appliances . . . Joseph F. Meister of Curtis Publishing Co. will address members of Washington Chapter, National Office Management Association, at a meeting tonight in the Dodge Hotel . . . Net earnings of Chase National Bank increased 11 percent in 1949 over the previous year . . . Steel production this week is estimated at 98.2 percent, up from 97.2 last week.

OFFICERS: New officers of the Washington Association of Credit Men are: Edward H. Fawsett, president; John M. Castell, first vice president; William V. Lee, second vice president, and John H. Geiger, secretary. Directors include James F. Bridges, Edgar L. Burch, S. K. Cartwright, Robert E. Corish, John P. Crowley, Newton B. Ellison and Clifford B. Smith.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Attorney General J. Howard McGrath will be a speaker at the convention of the National Automobile Dealers Association in Atlantic City, February 5-8 . . . Victor A. Lambert of New York has been elected chairman of the Jewelry Industry Council, succeeding Cecil D. Kaufman of Washington . . . Daniel W. Bell, president of American Security & Trust Co., has been elected a director and treasurer of the Investors League, Inc. . . . E. C. Kemper, special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will address the safe deposit section of the D. C. Bankers Association at a meeting January 24 in the Lafayette Hotel . . . Robert B. McColl has retired as president of American Locomotive Co. D. W. Fraser will serve as president in addition to present duties as chairman.

CONSOLIDATION: Two prominent investment banking firms have consolidated under the name of Blair, Rollins & Co., Inc. They were formerly known as Blair & Co., Inc., and E. H. Rollins & Sons, Inc. The firm's local office, under the managership of Franklin H. Ellis, is in the Bowen Building.

DEPOSITS RISE: Deposits of the Citizens Bank of Riverdale, Md., increased $800,000 last year, President Alfred H. Smith reported. New appointments included: Joshua I. Miller, assistant cashier, to manage new real estate department at Avondale branch; John F. Lyon, assistant cashier, to manage regular loan department at Bladensburg branch; York D. Hollingsworth, assistant cashier, to personnel manager; Ted V. Gminge to manager of banking department at Avondale branch, and Harry Breitbach to assistant manager at Bladensburg branch. All other officers and directors were reelected.

TWA Officer Starts His 25th Year in Aviation

Fleming

Clarence E. Fleming, 4000 Cathedral ave. nw., vice president of Trans World Airline, has started his twenty-fifth year in the aviation industry today. Associated with TWA for the past 15 years, he has been in Washington since 1938.

He began his aviation career in 1925 with National Air Transport and three years later he joined Southwest Express as general traffic manager. He was elected a vice president of TWA in 1942 after serving as assistant general traffic manager and assistant to the president.

Warner Bros. Has Gain in Earnings

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—An improvement in earnings of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., was reported today by Harry M. Warner, president.

In his annual report to stockholders, Warner said it is estimated the net profit for the quarter ended November 26, first quarter of the company's fiscal year, will exceed the $3,093,000 for the comparable quarter of the previous year.

Gross receipts were lower, he said, but the decline was more than offset by lower operating costs and amortization charges.

Consolidated profit of the film company and its subsidiaries for the year ended August 31, he said, was $10,466,000 or $1.43 a share, against $11,837,000 or $1.62 a share the previous year.

A. T. & T. Net Rises In Period and Year

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Net income of the American Telephone Telegraph Co. for the quarter ended December 31 was $63,740,000 or $2.56 a share, the company reported today. The per share figure is based on 24,930,000 shares outstanding.

Net income for the corresponding quarter of 1948 was $54,179,458 or $2.33 a share on 23,223,274 shares.

A preliminary report for the 12 months ended December 31 showed net income of $227,700,000 or $9.48 a share on 24,014,000 shares against $207,617,760 or $9.20 a share on 22,566,847 shares the previous year.

D. C. Agency Gains

J. Hicks Baldwin, general agent for the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Boston, reports that the Washington office, which he heads, finished 1949 with a gain of 41 percent over 1948. Through his agency more than three million dollars of life insurance protection was placed in the District of Columbia.

Werntz to Speak

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan 16 (AP).—Grains sank gently into lower territory on the Board of Trade today. Chief feature of the day's lethargic dealings was a lack of demand.

The market started weak and didn't pick up any strength as the day wore on, although final prices were above the session's lows. Despite the slump prices remained above the bottoms of last Thursday, when the market suffered a shaking down in line with a drop in securities prices.

Wheat ended ½-1¼ lower, corn was ⅛-1⅛ lower, oats were ¾-1⅛ lower, rye was 1¼-1⅝ lower, soybeans were unchanged to 1 cent lower and lard was 22 cents lower to 3 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Kaiser-Frazer to Show New Models Jan. 23

Detroit, Jan. 16 (AP).—Kaiser-Frazer Corp. announced today it will show three new lines of automobiles to its dealers and distributors on January 23.

The showing will be made at the K-F plant at nearby Willow Run. The announcement followed a meeting of the Kaiser-Frazer board of directors at Willow Run.

K-F resumed production of 1950 model cars last Monday following a shutdown that began last October 24. It currently is employing 8500 workers.

GOVERNMENT OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia, Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board—Pursuant to the provisions of Section 4 of the District of Columbia Industrial Safety Act (Public Law 271—77th Congress—Chapter 438—1st Session), the District of Columbia Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board hereby calls a public hearing "for the purpose of investigating reasonable standards of safety to employment, places of employment, in the use of devices and safeguards, and in the use of practices, means, methods, operations and processes of employment," connected with railroad overhead and side clearances, "and any person interested in the matter being investigated may appear and testify." Said meeting will be held in the Board Room (Room 500) of the District Building, 14th and E Streets, N. W., on FRIDAY, January 20, 1950, at 10:00 a. m. MRS. ALBERT W. ATWOOD, Chairman; FRANK E. WEAKLY, FRANK O'CONNOR. Jan. 17

GOVERNMENT OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia, January 9, 1950. A public hearing having been held by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in the matter of closing certain street area and public alleys in the District of Columbia, as hereinafter described, and, as the said Commissioners are of the opinion that the street area and alleys referred to should be closed, notice is hereby given that under date of December 27, 1949, they have prepared the following order: "Ordered that, pursuant to the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the street and alley areas as shown in green on the plats filed in the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia and numbered as Maps 3544, 3545, 3546, 3547, 4548, 3549, 3550, 3551 and 3553, are hereby ordered closed; same to take effect on and after FEBRUARY 15, 1950; the title to the land comprised in said areas so closed to revert to the abutting property owners as shown on said maps; the said closings to take effect jointly or separately by subsequent order or orders on the effective date aforesaid, according to Items 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 10, described as follows: (1) Closing of S Street, S.E., between 28th Street and 28th Place. (2) Closing of part of public alley abutting Lots 21, 800, 801 and 802, in Square 360. (3) Closing of Lowell Street, N.W., abutting U. S. Reservation 330, west of Foxhall Road. (4) Closing of public alley in Square 4284. (5) Closing of R Street, S.E., between 30th and 31st Streets. (6) Closing of part of 40th Street, S.E., south of Massachusetts Avenue. (7) Closing V Street, N.W., east of 48th Street, and street area north of V Street, abutting Lots 1 and 19, Square 1385. (8) Closing of all public alleys in Square 1818. (10) Closing of Chaplin Street, S.E., between C and D Streets, and public alleys in Square 5390 and 5400; and providing for dedication of street area in lieu thereof." Any and all parties interested must file, in writing, with the Commissioners, D. C., objections, if any, to these closings, or as to any item providing for the closing listed above, before FEBRUARY 15, 1950; otherwise said closing shall become effective on and after that date, in accordance with the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932. JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG, GUY MASON, GORDON R. YOUNG, Commissioners of the District of Columbia. Jan. 9-14,16-21,23-24.

ACREAGE, SALE 75

500 ACRES located in the zone of the new South Capitol Street Bridge. This bridge is now open for traffic to 50,000 capacity of automobiles per day(). This ground is located 4 sq. beyond the District line in Maryland. This bridge brings this property about 2 miles nearer the heart of Washington than the old 11th Street Bridge. It also brings this property in about 12 minutes by automobile to the heart of D. C. 95 acres of this land can be used for cemeteries. Cemetery ground when well developed retails at about $200,000 per acre, do a little figuring with your pencil and see what that amounts to. The remainder of this ground is suitable for commercial, apts. and low cost housing. Commercial ground in the zone of the Virginia end over the Potomac River Bridges worth around $500,000 an acre. One of the vice presidents of the Riggs Nat'l bank bought 30 acres over the Memorial Bridge for $30 000 and sold it to the Government for $1,500,000 and that was accomplished by condemnation jury. A farmer bought a farm over there for $3000; is now worth more than a million dollars. Take a ride over the new South Capitol Street Bridge to the District line, look ahead of you and you will see a big woods, that's my 500 acres, and if you will also take a look you will see about 100 million dollars worth of apartments and houses closing in on 3 sides of my property. This is a young man's job to subdivide this land, I am in my eighty-third year and I would not undertake it. If you have got good credit and a modest amount of cash you can buy this property, the balance of the purchase money 4% interest with release clause so you can pay as you go. Fulton R. Gordon, owner, 1427 Eye st. nw., DI. 8230. Home telephone, WO. 0933.

I have been in the land development for nearly two thirds of a century and I have developed 7 towns in the vicinity of Washington. Chevy Chase, D. C. was my largest development. I paid $800,000 for 400 acres. Now 1 acre of that same land, that is located at Conn. ave. and McKinley st. is worth more than what I paid for the 400 acres. That will give you an idea of what you can do with land when you develop it. Brokers Attention.

2 Men Held, Woman Freed In Slayings

Two men were held for action of the grand jury and a woman was exonerated at inquests yesterday into three Saturday night District slayings.

A coroner's jury held Robert Henry, 18, a printing shop file clerk, of 1128 Vermont ave. nw., in the fatal shooting of Ignacio Butler, 15, of 738 7th st. se.

Police testified two rival gangs of teenagers started an argument during a party at 1257 Howison pl. sw.

When the squabble was moved outside to the street, homicide squad detectives said, the Butler boy, a members of the Islanders Gang, said, "Who's the smallest member of your gang?"

"I'm him," Henry is said to have replied.

Admits Killing, Police Say

Police testimony was that Henry, a member of the 5th st. Lovers Gang, admitted drawing a revolver and shooting Butler through the head when Butler started for him.

Russell Ross, 30, a sawmill employe of Partlow, Va., also was held for grand jury action at an inquest into the death of Leroy Murray, 51, of 632 Morton st. nw.

Homicide detectives testified that Ross had gone to the Morton st. address to visit his wife, Matilda, and that she told him Murray had been choking her. There was a fight between the two men, they added, in which Murray suffered a fatal skull fracture.

Freed in Lamp Slaying

Miss Sarah Keyes, 49, of 1532 Bells ct. nw., was freed by a coroner's jury in the kerosene lamp slaying of Samuel Watson, 43, of 1525 Bells ct. nw.

Detectives stated the woman struck Watson in her home during an argument over a lampshade. However, it was testified that he struck her before she hit him over the head with the lighted kerosene lamp.

Watson's clothes were ignited and he ran from the house. He died of burns at 8 a. m. Sunday at Emergency Hospital.

Pawley to Conduct Information Program

'49 Safe for Aviation, CAB Member Declares

Josh Lee, member of the Civil Aeronautics Board, last night told members of the Democratic Women's Council that 1949 was "one of the safest years in the history of aviation." He spoke at the council's regular monthly meeting.

Only 88 persons lost their lives in crashes on CAB certified airlines, Lee said. His theme was "The Value of Aviation in World Commerce."

Roosevelt Teaches History on Caribbean Cruise

This is another installment of the serialization of "This I Remember," the nonfiction best seller in which Eleanor Roosevelt tells the story of Franklin D. Roosevelt's career, from 1924 to his death in 1945. Succeeding installments will be printed in The Washington Post through February 4.

By Eleanor Roosevelt

IN THE SUMMER of 1934 my husband decided to make a trip through the Caribbean and the Panama Canal, then out to Hawaii. With him were our two youngest sons, Franklin jr., and John. The newspapermen traveled on a separate ship, visiting Franklin every now and then. I remember his telling me with gleeful chuckles that he had been forced to fill the newspapermen in on most of the historical background of the places where they stopped. He was particularly interested in Cartagena, but I can well imagine that he insisted on lecturing on each and every point of historical interest along the way. This was a very good thing for our sons, but I know they did not let these history lessons prevent them from having a very good time. Their account to me of the trip was mostly of a recital of the wonderful parties they went to and the drives through cities with the daughters of officials who greeted their father.

Franklin was an extremely good traveler, and if he had not already known the history of all the places he visited he would have taken great pleasure in reading it. His knowledge of geography, stimulated by his stamp collection, was phenomenal and increased with the various trips he took. He had a keen interest, too, in the ship's navigation and, I think, always felt a certain responsibility even though he was only a passenger.

Once they reached Hawaii Franklin and the boys had a wonderful time. He enjoyed meeting the native queen and eating poi—a native delicacy which very few members of the party really liked.

While Franklin was gone I went West. Lorena Hickok had arranged to take her vacation at the same time and met my plane at Sacramento.

Miss Hickok and I parted in Portland, and I was joined by Miss Thompson, Louis Howe and Steve Early, who had come out to meet my husband and travel back to Washington with him. Louis had expected to meet Lorena Hickok and me in San Francisco and was very indignant at us for going on without making any effort to get in touch with him. It took me a while, but I finally made my peace with him. After my husband arrived we all listened to wild stories of pleasure in Hawaii and wonderful days at sea.

The boys left us at different stops on the way home to fly to various destinations, but I recall one dinner we had together on the train before they left, at which a number of Cabinet officers were present. They looked so horrified when they heard the boys arguing violently with Franklin on a number of points that I finally felt compelled to explain that in our family the boys had always been encouraged to express their opinions. I did not add what was soon evident—that their father always waited while they expressed themselves loudly and forcefully until each had had his say and then completely demolished them with a few well-chosen arguments of his own.

'34-'36 Quietest Years

AS I LOOK back, the years from 1934 to 1936 were probably the quietest, least anxious of any of the years spent in the White House. The reforms Franklin instituted were beginning to put the country back on a more even keel, and good feeling existed generally between capital and labor and between the President and Congress.

In the winter of 1936 Louis Howe finally moved from the White House to the hospital. We kept telling him and ourselves that he was going to improve and come back again, but suddenly word came that he had died. Louis' going was one of the greatest losses my husband sustained. He was to have others, and all were hard to bear because in public life you can have no private time for sorrow. Duties must be performed, and your own feelings must be suppressed. Louis' death deprived my husband of a close relationship and the satisfaction of having someone near to whom he could talk quite frankly, whose advice he might not always follow but whose presence was stimulating.

Franklin arranged for the funeral service to be held in the East Room. He seemed to feel that any person who lived and worked in the White House was entitled to this last tribute, if there was no objection on the part of the deceased's family.

Louis Howe's death left a great gap in my husband's life. I have always felt that if Louis had lived the number of people drawn closely but briefly into the working and social orbits of Franklin's life would have been fewer. For one reason or another no one quite filled the void which unconsciously he was seeking to fill. Each one in turn eventually disappeared from the scene—some with a bitterness which I understood but always regretted. There are not many men like Louis Howe in this world, men whose personal ambition is to accomplish things for someone else. It was some time before a personal friendship with Harry Hopkins—somewhat different but similar in certain ways — again brought Franklin some of the satisfaction he had known with Louis.

Election Night Scene

IN 1936 I visited the campaign headquarters and went with my husband on some of his campaign trips.

On election night when the returns came in, Maine and Vermont were found to be still in the Republican fold. My husband said, with a wicked twinkle in his eye: "I knew I should have gone to Maine and Vermont, but Jim wouldn't let me."

There was no uncertainty or waiting for the returns this election. As usual we were at Hyde Park, where on election night the dining room was always turned into what seemed to me the nearest thing to a newspaper office. The machines on which news came in were set up in a little room off the dining room. Franklin himself had telephones. Long dispatches were handed to him by relays of people, and everybody made out averages. I was, of course, expected to show interest in the returns, but I was also supposed to be with my husband's mother in the library helping to entertain the guests and keep all but a few favored ones out of the dining room.

The newspaper people would arrive and be given refreshments, and finally when the returns were in the people of Hyde Park would have a torchlight parade and come to greet my husband. Then we would go out on the porch and listen to a few words from him. Usually it was so cold we'd be shivering.

Now, as I look back, I realize that I was a very unsatisfactory person on these occasions. I always worried about whether anyone was being neglected, whether there was enough food or whether something might be going wrong. I never was able to forget about things, to take them naturally and enjoy myself and to let other people worry. Had I been able to I'm sure everyone would have had just as good a time.

That has been one of my bad habits all my life, even where the children are concerned. Instead of enjoying them, most of the time I was disciplining them or worrying about their health or trying to give them things that their father's illness prevented them from enjoying with him. I never was really carefree. It is a pity that we cannot in our younger days, when we really need it, enjoy the serenity that usually comes with age. We certainly would enjoy life more, and I am sure that somehow the responsibilities would all be taken care of quite as well.

2d Term Begins Well

WHEN we went back to Washington in 1936 Franklin was received with great acclaim, and his second term of office began very auspiciously. He had carried with him a big Democratic majority in the Congress, and the party members felt so secure that they began to believe they could do anything they wanted to. That is a bad attitude for any group of people to acquire, particularly when they are responsible for the smooth running of a country that has only just become stabilized after a great depression.

Throughout all those early years in Washington one of Franklin's aims was to change the bad feeling that existed between us and our Latin-American neighbors. He had always felt that our attitude was that of a rather objectionable big brother and that we would create better feeling by a wiser and more neighborly policy. After the 1936 elections he made a personal effort to implement this policy by attending the Inter-American Conference for the Maintenance of Peace, in Buenos Aires. He wanted to take our son James with him as his aide, partly because James had worked hard in the campaign and partly because he knew that James understood how to help him get about in crowds. On every trip he made Franklin always liked to have at least one of the boys with him if it did not interfere too much with something else they ought to do.

The question of Jimmy's rank arose. At that time he was a reserve officer in the Marine Corps, but in order to serve as his father's aide he was given the rank of lieutenant colonel. Later he asked to be demoted to captain again because he did not want to trade on a rank which had been given him for a specific purpose.

Franklin was deeply touched by the evident enthusiasm evoked by this trip. His success in creating good feeling in these South American countries was a great satisfaction to him.

On the way home my husband stopped in Uruguay. He always liked to tell the story of his greeting by Gabriel Terra, the president of that country. As they met Mr. Terra assured Franklin that he need not worry about anything happening to him, but since he, the president of Uruguay, had been threatened the President of the United States must not be surprised if there were some shots—he would not be the target. My husband got into the car and drove around, but in telling about it afterward Franklin said he could not help wondering if he might not be hit by mistake, even though he was not the target. However, no one was shot that day.

Bill Would Lift Grass Sitting Ban At State Capitol

Richmond, Va., Jan. 16 (AP). People may be able to join pigeons on the grass in Capitol Square under a bill introduced in the Virginia Senate today by Senator Charles W. Crowder of Richmond.

It doesn't contemplate any sudden uprooting of the "Keep Off the Grass" signs. Rather it would permit the director of grounds and buildings to survey growth, climate, etc., and in his own discretion—with the Governor's nod—permit periods of grass sitting. Now you can't go on the grass at all.

A standing committee will consider the grass sitting bill.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

It's an Informal Group, But Quite Large

"We strenuously object to the elimination of the weekly pass by Capital Transit," writes Herb Harris of 1121 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va., who styles himself: "President pro tem of the Transit Pass Borrowers Association."

AFTERTHOUGHT

The story about Fort Dupont golfers breaking all those windows in the new Sousa Junior High School got quite a good deal of attention.

But after playing the course the other day, and noting the relative positions (and distances) of tee, green and school, I have my doubts.

I suspect that a good amateur detective would find the floors of the school strewn with a lot more rocks than golf balls.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Black and white cat, 6 months old." (Adams 6759 and ask for Kleeo.)

"Four 7-week-old puppies, mixture of bulldog and wire-haired terrier." (Sligo 2674.)

"Frisky, affectionate white dog, about 1 year old; nice pet." (Chestnut 0075.)

"Four cute 6-week-old kittens." (Taylor 0845.)

"Five attractive black and white kittens." (Falls Church 2151.)

RELATIVITY AT WORK

"Here I am with an appointment in 10 minutes," I muttered, "and I didn't shave this morning."

"Your beard doesn't look bad," consoled the girl at the next desk.

"Really?" I replied, somewhat heartened.

"Really," she assured me. "I can hardly notice it. Of course, some people might object—but not me. I've just been checking through some pictures of President Garfield."

HELP WANTED

The District's new Alcoholic Clinic is about to get up a full head of steam in its attack on one of the most annoying social problems of our times.

Dr. Leopold E. Wexburg, in charge of the program, has a big job ahead of him. But with the community's support, he'll lick it.

Right now, Dr. Wexburg wishes he had more recreational facilities at his disposal—"the kind of things you can't ask Congress for."

Included in his list are a piano of some kind (just so it's in working condition), a record player, a ping pong table and a pool table.

GAY PAREE

I've just received a postcard from Paris which will probably be of interest to the many friends of Frank L. Dennis, currently with ECA, on leave of absence from The Washington Post. Frank writes:

"The Russians aren't far away, but you still see guys studying the Forme de Course (I guess that's French for "Scratch Sheet."—Ed.) in the subway.

"There's a race track in operation here all the time, even on Sunday. But the touts are no better than those at home.

"The best thing about Paris is that one can drive to the office and find an all-day parking place within 75 yards of the office."

Hmmm. If that's what Frank considers the best thing about Paris, he's older than I thought.

YEAH, BUT WHAT DOES A REPUBLICAN LOOK LIKE?

The American Newspaper Women's Club will hold a costume ball tonight, to honor the Trumans.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

My name is Zachary and I am 9 years old and I have a dog named Trixie. Trixie is so much of a pig that one day she ate some of my candy. She eats anything you give her. One day she ate some potatoes and cinnamon rolls.

Zachar. J. Balian, jr.
1810 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Dear Zachary:

My wife's name is Bernice and she is considerably more than 9 years old. She has a husband named Bill who is so much of a pig that he eats the candy he buys her. He also eats too many potatoes and cinnamon rolls, and in fact, he eats anything you put in front of him. I think this proves that all pigs are not dogs.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Why U.S. Offered to Help Tito

By Drew Pearson

A secret huddle of Russian and Hungarian generals plotting an attack on Yugoslavia is the inside reason for the State Department's sudden offer to aid Yugoslavia, if she is threatened.

Pearson

American intelligence agents in Vienna and Belgrade picked up the alarming report of the Russian military conference from the anti-Communist Hungarian underground.

Stalin attached such importance to the conference, according to this report, that he sent both his No. 1 aide, Georgi Malenkov, and Marshal Constantin Rokossowski, who is organizing the satellite defenses in eastern Europe.

Chief decision reached at the conference, according to the underground, was to build bases in the Tatra Mountains of Hungary for firing rockets into Yugoslavia.

A few days after this report was received, United States Ambassador George V. Allen told reporters in Belgrade that Washington is ready to help Yugoslavia "preserve her independence and sovereignty."

So far, the iron-nerved Tito has taken these reports coolly. He told American officials he regards the rumors of imminent attack as part of Russia's "war of nerves" on him, and predicts large-scale "guerilla" warfare against Yugoslavia this year, using the hard-bitten Communist troops who fought in the Greek mountains. The fighting will be billed by Soviet propaganda as an "uprising" of Yugoslavs.

Tito is a master of guerilla warfare himself and has established a defense line in the mountains.

U. S. Policy on Franco

Franco Spain received almost as much attention as the burning question of what to do about Formosa when Secretary of State Dean Acheson was closeted for six action-packed hours with the House Foreign Affairs Committee last week.

The meeting was so secret that chairman John Kee of West Virginia banished his official reporter, so that no written record would be made of the proceedings. However, Acheson's arguments on Formosa were similar to those he gave the Senate the day before, though his delineation of Spanish policy was so complete that it should have been presented to the American people.

Acheson left no doubts either about the State Department's opposition to the Franco dictatorship. There never can be a real understanding between the United States and Spain while Franco stays in power, he said, and it is time the Spanish people were waking up to the fact.

As far as he was concerned, Acheson said, we should continue to withhold full recognition of Spain (we partly recognize her now through a Charge D'Affaires) until Franco is turned out. Acheson frequently referred to the Spanish dictator as "undependable" and irreconcilable in his contempt for democracy.

Franco Hinders Trade

The Secretary of State added, however, that if the United Nations ever rescinded its 1946 resolution—which led most member nations to recall their ambassadors to the Franco government—the United States could hardly refuse to reestablish an embassy in Madrid.

"But it is not our intention to initiate such action," reported Acheson. "To do so would imply approval of the Franco government. On the other hand, I think recognition would come quickly if there was a change of government."

He hastened to add that he meant no criticism of the Spanish people, of whom he had the highest regard, but only of the government leaders who were preventing them from sharing in the progress of European democracies. Spain probably would be getting Marshall Plan aid right now, but for Franco, Acheson pointed out.

He also explained that the European Cooperation Administration had found it virtually impossible to do business with Franco because of the restrictions he placed on American aid and his refusal to abide by ECA regulations.

For instance, Acheson pointed out, Spain limits foreign investment in industrial plants to 25 percent and prohibits altogether any foreign participation in plant management. Also, Franco freezes profits so as to virtually prohibit reinvestment in plant expansion.
